CAPTURE ONE OF FLEEING NEGROES

But not the Youth that is Accused of Killing William Brown. Says Suttler Admitted having Done the Deed.

Truman Williams, the negro boy who left Saturday evening with Solomon Suttler, accused of the murder of William Brown Jr., near Silver Run, was captured in Catonsville, Maryland, by the Baltimore County police Monday afternoon. Suttler is still at large though police and detectives are scouring Baltimore City and nearby sections for him.

Williams, when arrested, declared to the authorities that Suttler told him on the way to Reisterstown Saturday night that he had killed Brown. After they got to Reisterstown they started to walk toward Baltimore and, becoming weary, lay down along the road and fell asleep. When Williams awoke his companion was gone and, according to the boy's story, he has no idea what direction the other fellow took. Williams was placed in the Catonsville jail. The sheriff of Carroll County is in Baltimore awaiting the expected arrest of Suttler and, if this is accomplished, both boys will be brought back together. It is understood that Williams is being held simply as a witness.

Williams was caught at his old home in Catonsville where his mother resides. It is believed that Suttler may go back to his home at Hoffman Place, Baltimore, and that part of the city is being closely watched. Some time ago, when Suttler was at the farm of Charles Mathias, near Silver Run, he made the statement that he had a wealthy brother living in Chicago and that, if he had the necessary funds, he would go out and pay him a visit. Should Suttler get away from the Maryland officers it is regarded as probable that he would start out for the Illinois city.

Both boys were secured from the Cheltenham Reform School in Maryland, between Baltimore and Washington. The school has a large farm in Prince George's County and is widely known.

The feeling in Carroll County ran high immediately following the spread of the news concerning the brutal murder but the sentiment has quieted down, except with the more excitable class of people, and it is the general feeling that the law should be allowed to take its course. It is therefore the remotest sort of a possibility that there would be mob violence in the event of Suttler's arrest and his return to Carroll County.

NAME APPEAL DAYS

REMONSTRANCES AGAINST LICENSE

Two Gettysburg Places Included, and Two in York Springs. College and Seminary Professors Figure.

Two licensed places in Gettysburg had remonstrances filed against them this afternoon, and two hotels in York Springs had similar action taken. The remonstrants in every instance were represented by Charles E. Stable Esq. and John D. Keith Esq.

The Hotel Washington, Oliver Klinefelter, proprietor, and the George T. Hartzell Cafe, both in the Second Ward of Gettysburg, are the two town places against which the remonstrances have been filed. Two were filed against the Hotel Washington, the one signed by Dr. W. A. Granville, president of Gettysburg College and Dr. Charles F. Sanders, a member of the faculty. The grounds given are the lack of necessity and that Mr. Klinefelter is not a fit person to whom license shall be granted.

The second one against this hotel gives the lack of necessity as the only specified reason. It is signed by thirty seven men and thirty one women. Of the thirty seven men signing, eighteen are either directly or indirectly connected with either the Seminary or the College, and many of the women are members of their families.

Only one remonstrance is entered against the Hartzell Cafe and it is signed by President Granville, Dr. F. M. Bickle, dean of the college; and Prof. Sanders. It denies the necessity and also states that Mr. Hartzell is not a fit person to whom license should be granted.

In the case of the remonstrances against the York Springs hotels it is alleged in both instances that the petitions for license are defective in that they are not accompanied by a certificate signed by the necessary number of electors. The question of lack of necessity is also named, and the fact that the granting of the license would be detrimental to the public good.

The two proprietors affected are Charles A. Hamilton at the York Springs Hotel, and Irvin E. Weaver at the hotel of C. E. Lerew. There are thirty one signers against the first of these, and twenty two against the second.

To-day was the last day, under the law, on which remonstrances, to be effective, may be filed.

LOW AVERAGE FOR NOW THREATEN TO HAND OF DEATH

Figures Furnished by the State would Make it Appear that Adams County Apples Sold at Low Prices.

Adams County orchardists averaged only 58 cents a bushel for their apples this fall, as against $1.00 and $1.05 a bushel received by growers in northern tier counties. The authority for this statement is the new "Weekly Press Bulletin" of the State Department of Agriculture which says:

"Warren county carried off the high price apple records with an average of $1.05 for a bushel. McKean, Forest, Elk, and Cameron counties averaged $1.00 per bushel while in Adams county, the heart of the apple belt, the average price was 58 cents a bushel."

The attention of C. Arthur Griest, president of the Fruit Growers' Association of Adams County, was called to the paragraph this morning and he gave several explanations for what is at first glance an evident error.

Mr. Griest calls attention, among other things, to the fact that the counties getting the high average have no canning or evaporating establishments. While barreled fruit from Adams County brings $2.25 net for three bushels and the best fancy boxed fruit yields a net return of $2.25 a bushel, the bulk apples sold to the canning plants averaged only 60 cents a hundred pounds or 30 cents a bushel; and some of them sold as low as 10 and 20 cents a bushel. All of these go to make up the average price for apples grown here, while the northern tier growers do not have places at which to dispose of their culls, and consequently do not receive the low figures which bring down the general average.

In addition, Mr. Griest states, the counties mentioned raise largely the "Northern Spy", a high priced apple. They make no particular effort to ship in large quantities as do the Adams County orchardists and consequently have a home market which means larger prices.

Adams County fruit is selling in New York markets fifty cents a barrel in advance of the New York State fruit so that its quality is well recognized but the distance from the markets and high freight rates are a great hindrance. Mr. Griest stating that a box of western apples can be shipped to New York for the same rate that a barrel of Adams County fruit may be shipped to the same point.

The "Weekly Press Bulletin" also deals with the potato yield and finds that, while Adams County has the second largest yield per acre in the State, the average price is as low as that received anywhere. It says:

"The greatest average production of potatoes to an acre was made in Philadelphia county with 130 bushels while Adams was second with 120 bushels to an acre and Greene third with 113 bushels."

"Cameron county carries off the prize of securing the highest average price for potatoes, a mark of $1.10 per bushel being established. The low average was secured in Adams and Fulton counties at 63 cents a bushel. The higher averages were obtained as follows: Tioga, $1.00; McKean, 96 cents; Allegheny, Beaver, Sullivan and Susquehanna, 94 cents."

Council Makes Appointments after One Member is Refused a Vote. Now Find Another Failed to File.

With the election of Charles P. Dougherty as president and the re-appointment of all the former officers and employees the new town council organized on Monday evening with Burgess Eicholtz in the chair. C. B. Kitzmiller is continued as secretary, Philip R. Bickle as treasurer, Edward Newman as street supervisor, and Joseph Carver as janitor.

Horace Smiley was re-elected police and elevated to the position of chief. A. V. Weikert, substitute since the departure of W. W. Emmons, was named as the second member on the force. No action was taken on the office of borough attorney, the interpretation of the law being that the appointment of J. Donald Swope Esq., made two years ago, holds for a term of four years.

The real contest of the evening was for the presidency. Martin Winter was not able to be present, leaving only eight members to do the balloting. Messrs. Dougherty, McDonnell, and Funkhouser were put in nomination and the first vote stood Dougherty 4, McDonnell 4. Burgess Eicholtz cast the deciding vote for Mr. McDonnell and was about to declare him elected when Mr. Gilbert announced that Mr. Tawney could not legally vote as a member of council because he had not filed his expense account for the recent election. Mr. Tawney admitted this and a new ballot was ordered. It resulted Dougherty 5, Funkhouser 2, and Mr. Dougherty was declared elected. The committee appointments will be made later.

Messrs. Kitzmiller, Newman, and Carver were re-elected without opposition. The vote for treasurer stood Philip R. Bickle 5, Charles E. Swisher 2.

The first ballot for police resulted: Horace Smiley 6, A. V. Weikert 3, John C. Shearer 2, C. W. Culp 2, Norman H. Swartz 1. Mr. Smiley was declared elected and the ballot for the second officer was then taken and resulted: Weikert 5, Shearer 2. Mr. Smiley was named chief unanimously.

The meeting was adjourned to next Monday evening, and a motion prevailed making the regular meeting night of council the first Tuesday of each month.

After Monday evening's session Mr. Tawney filed his statement with the Clerk of the Courts, declaring election expenses of less than $50 and he was then re-sworn by Burgess Eicholtz, as a member of the council.

This morning it was discovered that Mr. Funkhouser had failed to file his expense account at the primary election and several of the members of council threaten to endeavor to overthrow the proceedings of Tuesday night on that ground. Mr. Funkhouser filed this morning, but the members who are agitating the matter claim that Tuesday's elections are still illegal.

GEN. DODGE, HERO OF 60'S, IS DEAD

Distinguished Soldier and Railroad Builder Passes Away.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Jan. 4.—Major General Grenville Mellen Dodge, distinguished soldier and railroad builder, died at his home here.

Two notable services to his country assure General Dodge a place among the history makers of the civil war and reconstruction periods.

As a soldier his valor is attested by the fact that four horses were shot from under him in the battle of Pea Ridge, and that he himself received wounds in several battles.

As a pioneer in western railroad building he has the Union Pacific railroad, whose line he located and whose construction he superintended, standing today as a monument to his memory. It was said of him some years ago that he was instrumental in laying more miles of track than any other man in the United States.

General Dodge was born in Danvers, Mass., in 1831. He was trained as a civil engineer and studied at the Partridge Military academy and also at Norwich university.

12 DIE AS SHIP IS RENT BY GAS

Seven Others Hurt When Tanker Aztec Explodes.

WAS LYING AT WHARF

Bodies Were Hurl'd High in the Air, One Being Found on Steamship Fifty Feet Away.

New York, Jan. 4.—One man is known to be dead and at least eleven others are believed to have perished in an explosion that wrecked the engine room of the Norwegian oil tank steamship Aztec at a Brooklyn dock. Seven others were seriously injured.

Most of the victims were trapped below decks, and those who were not instantly killed probably were drowned by the water that flooded the engine room through a great hole blown in the side of the vessel.

The Aztec had just left a dry dock, and the cause of the explosion is unknown, although it is believed to have been caused by the bursting of a tank of 10,000 cubic feet of gas that was used in connection with the oil fuel for the engine. There were three other gas tanks on board, each holding 25,000 gallons.

For several hours after the explosion occurred city firemen worked desperately but fruitfully to recover the bodies of the victims. As it was almost certain that those below at the time could not have escaped with their lives, it was finally decided to pump the ship dry before renewing attempts to reach the bodies.

Most of the injured were rescued by Captain A. F. Bennett, of the tug Dalzeline, which was steaming down the river near the dock at the time of the explosion. Bennett said he saw the body of a man hurled into the air, followed by a flame that shot fifty feet high, and which was accompanied by a terrific explosion. The body fell into the river and sank immediately. Captain Bennett at once ordered the Dalzeline under the stern of the Aztec and took off seven of the crew, all badly injured.

The body of another man, a fireman, was blown upon the deck of the Roselands, a steamship anchored about fifty feet away.

The entrance to the dock was besieged by a frantic crowd of women relatives of the crew and dock workers, whom the police had difficulty in handling.

The Aztec was under charter to the Intercean Transport company, of this city. The tanker recently arrived from France and went into dry dock on December 24, and was to have sailed for Philadelphia this week to take on a cargo for a return trip to France.

In addition to the bombs the police said they also discovered a quantity of dynamite, sulphur, fuses and fuelling caps.

The prisoner was taken to headquarters.

The arrest of Altanasio resulted from statements made to police by three men who were arrested earlier in the day in connection with an explosion last Friday night that seriously injured two persons and damaged an apartment house.

GREECE DEMANDS RELEASE OF CONSULS

Athens Cabinet Much Wrought Up Over Coup.

Sofia, Jan. 4.—The Greek authorities have demanded that General Sarail, the French commander at Salonika release the Teutonic, Bulgarian and Turkish consuls on the ground that their seizure was illegal according to information received here. The consulates were under the protection of Greek gendarmes when the arrests were made.

In addition to this it was said that the allies had agreed to notify Greece in advance if it decided to take any action against the consular representatives of the Teutons.

Won't Free Teuton Consuls.

London, Jan. 4.—Athens advices to Rome declare that the allied commanders at Salonika have rejected the Greek government's demand that they surrender the consulates of the Teutonic allies and have also refused to give up the arrested consuls.

Other Athens dispatches say that owing to the continued arrest of subjects of the central powers the situation in Greek Macedonia is hourly becoming more serious.

Premier Skouloudis takes the stand that the arrests of foreigners which enjoying the protection of the Greek flag constitutes a violation of international law and another protest may be made to the allies.

The Greek premier declared that he hoped the protest of the Greek government would result in the liberation of the consular officials at Salonika.

Paris, Jan. 4.—Press despatches from Switzerland and Italy continue to affirm that the illness of Emperor William is serious.

It is even asserted it will be necessary to provide him with an artificial palate made of silver.

RUSSIAN DRIVE NEAR CZERNOWITZ

Bukowinian Capital Menaced by the Muscovites.

CONTINUE TERRIFIC OFFENSIVE

The Czars' Uncle is Said to be in Bucharest to Sway Rumanian's Action.

London, Jan. 4.—The Russians have taken the heights northeast of Czernowitz, the capital of Bukowina, according to a Russian official statement. The population of Czernowitz is being held ready for evacuation.

The tremendous offensive of the Russians is continuing along the entire front in Bessarabia and South-eastern Galicia. The fighting around Czernowitz has raged for three days.

The official statement says: "On the Stripa front the Austrians before our attack were forced to retire on new positions. Near Czernowitz in a particularly heavy engagement we captured several heights and took fifteen officers and 855 men prisoners. We captured three machine guns and one bomb mortar."

"In the Riga district a lively campaign, in which a German armored mortar car took part, occurred on the Baldon road."

"North of Chortorysk the Austrians were twice repulsed in attacks on our fortifications and fell back, with heavy losses, to their original positions."

The following telegram has been received by the Star from Rome:

"Grand Duke Boris, the uncle of the czar, has arrived unexpectedly in Bucharest. It is reported that he is entrusted with a secret mission in connection with Russia's plans for the invasion of Bulgaria."

The Russian campaign in Bessarabia and eastern Galicia is the one great military activity of the present stage of the war. The Russians are attacking on a front of about 300 miles. It is estimated that fully 3,000,000 men are engaged, the forces being about evenly divided.

The Russians are excellently equipped and are expending their new stores of ammunition freely. It is believed that the new Russian offensive will have an important influence on Rumanian action in the Balkans.

Field Marshal von Mackensen, commander of the Teutonic forces in their sweep through Serbia and Macedonia, is at Czernowitz for the purpose of threatening Rumania and for an active defensive against the Russian advance in Galicia.

Vienna Says Attacks Failed.

Vienna, Jan. 4.—The Austrian war office has issued the following official communication:

"The enemy now is also resuming its offensive against the esplanade front of General Pflanzer and Balin (the enemy), after two unsuccessful attacks on New Year's night and once the following forenoon, began an attack against our entrenchments near Toporitz, which was repulsed after hand-to-hand fighting. Two hours later, in the same sector, an enemy regiment (18,000 men) advanced, of which the greater part was repulsed. Fighting within this sector continues, none of our positions has been still engaged. The enemy's losses are extraordinarily great."

PRISONER RETURNS TO JAIL

Escaped Trusty Goes Back to Warder's Night Not Suffer.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Tony Marino, Sing Sing prison trusty, who was known as "Butler" to Thomas Mott Osborne, the indicted warder, and who escaped, returned of his own volition.

He said he rode to New York on a train with two prison guards as far as Tarrytown, but they failed to see him. He returned to show his regard for Warren Osborne.

Marino was on the train with M. Reno coming back to Ossining, after searching for him all day in the vicinity of Tarrytown. The deputy warden followed the "trusty" in a carriage to the prison gate.

Marino has served eight years of a sentence of ten years and six months for grand larceny.

Trail-Hitter Slays His Mother.

Youthful Financier.

My five-year-old nephew told me one day that he had no place to keep his money, so I bought him a small deposit bank, relates a correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. He was delighted with it. When I kissed him good night he asked me if I would keep it for him. I was somewhat surprised, and asked him why he wanted me to keep it for him, whereupon he said: "Well, auntie, I know you won't take anything out of it and you might put something in it."

Point of Interest.

A small boy who inherits his father's egotism was told that he might be president of the United States. He evinced no surprise but merely remarked, "That's an easy guess. But what do you think my prospects are for a second term?"

Important to Human Welfare.

It is not without reason that cookery is called an art. There is nothing which does more to build up and maintain good health than the proper preparation of food. It may be considered the first essential. It is commonly considered a menial task, yet next to motherhood it is one of the most important.

FUTURE HISTORIES TO BE FILLED WITH RECORDS OF EVENTFUL 1915

Sinking of Lusitania Stands Out as Most Dramatic Incident of the Last Twelve Months.

Chronicles of Year to Fill Pages in the Books That Our Children Will Study in the Future.

THE youngster 1916 enters as old Father Time is cutting another notch in his gun and labeling it "1915." The old, passing out, will probably go down in history as the bloodiest of all years. Not in the recorded deeds of man has there been a twelve-month period in which so many lives have been sacrificed on the altar of the war god. Looking back, one is tempted to consider those events which are destined to occupy most of the space in the history books that our children will study in the years which hold for them—who knows what?

Of course there will be a large margin for discussion and dispute. Who can point to this or that occurrence as the most important, the most dramatic, that took place in 1915?

Sinking of Lusitania.
One is forced to select the world war as the most important, and no one will enter an argument. But the feature of the war that was the most terrible—all of it is horrible—was the destruction of the Cunard line steamship Lusitania, which was sunk by a torpedo fired by a German submarine in the English channel on May 7, with the resultant loss of about 1,100 lives, including 100 citizens of the United States. The vessel was torpedoed off Kinsale, on the coast of Ireland. The German government has never made known the name of the commander of the undersea boat, but has made known the fact that he was acting under the specific orders of Admiral von Tirpitz, head of the German admiralty.

This led up to the diplomatic exchanges between the two nations, which for a time were near the breaking point. The United States demanded a disavowal of the act of the submarine commander, but Germany failed to comply with the request. However, after the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic on Aug. 19, when the diplomatic exchanges were taking place, the German government gave to the government of the United States the assurance that no more vessels carrying passengers would be sunk by German submarines unless sufficient warning was given and the safety of the noncombatants provided for.

Diplomatic Exchanges.

Probably no transactions between two governments will occupy more space in our children's histories than those between President Wilson and the German government. On May 13 the first protest was filed by Secretary of State Bryan. This was six days after the sinking of the Lusitania. The German reply, failing to meet the demands of this government and in many details extremely unsatisfactory, was followed by another note on June 10. On July 24 the third and last Lusitania note was dispatched, in which President Wilson stated that any further encroachments on the part of Germany would be considered "deliberately unfriendly." Then, finally, on Oct. 5, Germany disavowed the sinking of the liner Arabic and gave the assurances already referred to.

Shortly after that, however, on Nov. 7, the Italian liner Ancona was torpedoed in the Mediterranean sea by a submarine carrying the flag of Germany's ally, Austria. Nine Americans lost their lives when this steamer sank. On Dec. 11 a note was sent to Austria demanding a disavowal, reprimand of the submarine commander and reparation for the loss of American lives. The reply of Austria was published in this country on Dec. 19. She stated that the evidence was incomplete and gave indications of wishing to compromise. But President Wilson sent on Dec. 20 what has been termed the "stiffest" note since the war started, in which he positively refused to compromise and demanded that the requests of this nation be heeded at once.

Recall of Dumba.

The exchanges with Austria were especially important, as the United States government had on Sept. 9 requested the recall of the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, Dr. Konstantin Dumba. This diplomat had been connected with plots to foment trouble in factories in this country that were supplying munitions of war to the enemies of the central powers. The request was immediately granted, and the diplomat sailed on Oct. 5, about a month prior to the sinking of the Ancona.

Aside from the submarine warfare, five other features of the war stand out, destined to worry young Americans, future students of history. These are the Austro-German drive against Russia, the operations at the Dardanelles, the aerial warfare on London, the allied offensive at Loos and the Austro-German drive through Serbia, in which Bulgaria played a big part. To be sure, some will say that this or that should be included in this resume, and every one is entitled to his or her opinion. Many will claim that in this list of five great features of the war the entrance of Italy in the struggle should be included. This occurred on May 24, but the operations on the Austro-Italian front were of comparatively little significance. Others will say that the British order in council which for made neutral trade with Germany should be listed. These orders were issued on March 15.

Drive Against Russia.

The Austro-German drive against Russia started about the 1st of May. The Russians had up to this time been on the offensive and had occupied on March 22 the Austrian fortress Przemyśl. This allied victory was achieved only after a long siege. Then the Russian powers assumed the offensive, which swept through Galicia and far into Russia. On June 3 Przemyśl fell and was followed by Lemberg on June 23, the capture of Warsaw on Aug. 5, the capture of Novogorodsk on Aug. 19 and the capture of Brest Litovsk on Aug. 25, when Germany and Austria withdrew many of their troops from this front, having entirely achieved their purpose.

The Dardanelles Fighting.

Histories today are occupied with events that happened in the Spanish American war, and what is more interesting than the naval exploits of 1898? Every one remembers the race against time that the battleship Oregon ran around Cape Horn to reach Santiago. Every one remembers Dewey's thrilling battle at Manila. Like wise our children will be greatly interested in the Dardanelles campaign.

Here England made her big mistake. On Feb. 24 the allied fleet bombarded the forts defending the strait. The mistake, all military critics agree, lay in the fact that England did not send a supporting army with the fleet at the time of the first attack. Finally, when she did send an army, the Turks were firmly entrenched, and this ended the withdrawal of part of the army on the Gallipoli peninsula on Dec. 20. The failure was expensive and tended to show that the greatest fleet that England and France could send was powerless to force the strait, the best natural fortification in the world. The estimated cost of this failure is 100,000 lives and seven big battleships. On March 18 the British battleships Irresistible and Ocean and the French battleship Bouvet were sunk in the Dardanelles. On April 5 the British battleship Lord Nelson was destroyed by the Turks. On May 7 the British battleship Goliath was torpedoed in the Dardanelles, with a loss of 500 lives. On May 25 the British warship Triumph was sunk, followed on May 28 by the Majestic.

An interesting feature of this campaign was the report that came just as 1915 was passing that had the British continued their bombardment on March 19 the strait would have been forced, as there remained but seven teen shells in the principal fort on that day, and the Turks had made all preparations to evacuate. However, this report could not be verified.

After this the scene shifted to the Balkan states, where Bulgarian, German, Austrian, Turkish, British, French, Serbian and Montenegrin forces are now fighting.

Air Craft Are Successful.

Germany demonstrated during the war the fact that airships could travel a great distance and wage war on an enemy. Every one is familiar with the frequent raids made on London, Paris and other cities.

The allied offensive at Loos started on Sept. 25 and resulted in partial success for England and France, but at a terrible loss of life. The German front was broken for five miles at La Bassée and Souchez and for twenty-five miles in Champagne. Many guns were captured. This fighting was probably the most severe of the war and was brought forcibly home to Americans by the fact that a great many members of the foreign legion, born in the United States, were killed.

As the year closes Germany and Austria, aided by their ally Bulgaria, are bringing to an end their successful invasion of Serbia, which began during the first week of October. Nish, the capital of Serbia, fell on Nov. 9 and on Nov. 28 Pristina was captured by the Teutons, with 28,000 Serbian troops. It is estimated that but 50,000 Serbian troops remain out of 200,000 at the year's passage.

Lansing Succeeds Bryan.

So much for the war, unless one connects the resignation of Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan with the struggle in Europe. An avowed apostle of peace and opponent of preparedness, the secretary refused to sign the second Lusitania note on the ground that it was too warlike and resigned his portfolio. This was on June 8 and the following day President Wilson appointed Robert Lansing, who had been counselor to the state department, secretary of state.

These are some of the things our children will study in the years to come. This will be our future European history. American history will deal with Mexico, too. Huerta came out before 1915 was born. Then the revolutionists split. One faction was headed by Carranza and the other by Villa. On Feb. 3 Villa proclaimed himself president of Mexico.

Skirting the Difficulty.
She—"How do you like my skirt, dearie?" He—"Well, pet, I suppose it's all right, but isn't it a bit long for a skirt?"

Life's Inequity.
A man who attends strictly to his own business, merely gets the reputation of being unsociable.

and on June 25 Carranza troops occupied the City of Mexico. Fighting between the factions continued through out the year. On Aug. 5 representatives of the United States and the Central and South American republics met in New York city to find means of establishing a stable government in the place of chaotic chaos. On Aug. 14 these representatives sent an appeal to both factions asking that they make peace. On Oct. 9 the conference decided that Carranza was the man to lead the republic and recognized him, and he became provisional president. Villa kept on fighting until the passing of the year, when he decided he had enough and gave up the struggle.

Huerta Shows Up Again.

In the meantime, however, Huerta came from his exile in Spain to New York city, where he remained quiet for a short time. As he was endeavoring to reach Mexico and again stir up the hornets' nest he was arrested at the border by federal authorities and held on a charge of conspiracy. Prospects for permanent peace in Mexico seem exceptionally bright as 1915 says farewell.

It was an off year in political circles. No big campaigns were on, and every one looked forward to 1916, which is a presidential year. In the few elections that were held the Democratic majority in the house of representatives was slightly reduced and the party's majority in the senate was slightly increased.

The President's Wedding.

All the world loves a lover, and all the world forgot the war long enough to become intensely interested in the marriage of President Woodrow Wilson to Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt, which occurred at the Washington hotel on the evening of Feb. 18. Their brief honeymoon was spent in Hot Springs, Va. This wedding stands out as the leading social event of the year and was the signal for the opening of one of the most brilliant seasons in the history of our national capital.

Future histories of American sports will be big volumes. The first notable event in this sphere was the victory of Jess Willard, who, by defeating Jack Johnson at Havana, brought the world's heavyweight title back to the white race. The big league baseball season opened on April 14. On June 5 Walter J. Travis won the fourth Metropolitan golf championship. On June 18 Jerome D. Travers won the open golf championship of the United States. On Sept. 7 William M. Johnston won the tennis championship of the United States. On Oct. 3 the Boston American league team won the fifth and deciding game of the world's series and became the baseball promoters of the universe. In the football world Princeton was defeated by Harvard and Yale in turn was defeated by Harvard. In one of the most notable games of the year, which was witnessed by nearly all the officials of the government, the Army defeated the Navy at the Polo grounds in New York. President Wilson, with Mrs. Galt, who is now Mrs. Wilson, saw the game. On Dec. 17 officials of the National and American leagues met officials of the Federal league in New York and started the negotiations looking toward peace between these rival organizations.

The Eastland Disaster.

Newspapers are our present day histories, and throughout the year they were crowded with sensational stories about sundry things. The biggest of these was the sinking of the excursion steamer Eastland in the Chicago river, with the loss of 881 lives. The boat was overcrowded, having 2,488 persons aboard. This occurred on July 24. Harry Thaw, long in the limelight, claimed his share of printers' ink. He was placed on trial on March 8 on a charge of conspiring to escape from Matteawan and subsequently acquitted. On June 18 he was granted the privilege of having a jury pass on the question of his sanity. His twelve peers found that he was sane, and his release followed.

Charles Becker, former lieutenant of the New York police force, having been convicted of instigating the murder of the gambler, Herman Rosenthal, was electrocuted at Sing Sing prison on the morning of July 30, thus ending one of the most famous and sensational cases in the criminal history of the country.

The most revolting crime during the year was not the work of one man. On the night of Aug. 15 a mob of citizens, presumably from Marietta, Ga., broke into the prison at Milledgeville and took therefrom Leo Frank, Frank a Jew, had been convicted of the murder of Mary Phagan, a Marietta girl employed in his pencil factory in Atlanta. He was rushed through the country in an automobile to the home of his alleged victim, and when the sun rose on the morning of the 16th it shone on his body dangling from the limb of a tree. He was lynched after a fellow prisoner had made a dastardly attack on him with a knife. Civilization was shocked.

Another sensational crime was the attempt to assassinate J. Pierpont Morgan, the banker. On July 3 Frank Holt, a German college professor, shot the banker at his Glen Cove (N. Y.) home, but the wound was inconsequential. Holt later committed suicide by jumping from the top of his fall cell to the stone floor. He had been so demoralized because Mr. Morgan was lending money to the allied powers.

The death list includes Emily Croft, the noted hymn writer; James Grebban, war correspondent; Frank James, last of the bandit James brothers; Mary Anna Jackson, widow of "Stonewall" Jackson; W. R. Nelson, editor of the Kansas City Star; Robert T. Washington, noted negro educator, and others.

Furnace the Goat.
If you happen to be in doubt what to do with your tin cans, just dump them, not too many at a time, into your furnace, which, like the ubiquitous goat, consumes them with avidity. Have no fear, they will nourish the furnace, clear out the chimney and dispose of the tin can problem until spring.

Marked Resemblance.
"Before entering a pond or stream a moccasin or other water snake fills himself with wind, and—" helpfully began Professor Pate. "The average lion does exactly the same before he enters the legislature," interrupted the Old Coder. Sure Causes of Insomnia.
Insomnia, complete or partial, almost surely follows any undue excitement, worry, anxiety, and chieftains of all peoples engaged in war would be more than human if they did not succumb to the dread affection which much make them feel that, like Macbeth, they had murdered sleep and would sleep no more.

Saved Vines From Snails.

An account was published some years ago of the clearing out of a celebrated vineyard known as the Clos de Vougeot, in France, from which no fewer than 120 bushels of snails were removed at a cost in labor of more than one hundred francs less than the price obtained by the sale of the snails. It was estimated that these snails would have damaged the vines to an extent represented by the value of fifteen to twenty pipes of wine.

Scourge Almost Wiped From Earth.
The most terrific and wholesale "blunder" of all, smallpox, has been almost wiped off the earth by medical science. Barely a century ago from 40 to 60 per cent of the inmates of homes for the blind in Europe were there on account of smallpox! Now, thanks to vaccination, scarcely two per cent of all the blind owe their calamity to this cause—Exchange.

Gibraltar of the Pacific

IN THE past few years the United States government has spent over $13,000,000 in making Pearl Harbor able to offer adequate resistance to attack from land and sea. The work is nearly finished now, and when it is done the United States will possess as formidable and as important a fortress as any in the world.

Before the steamer approaching Honolulu from the southwest is a magnificent concave sweep of land rising above the clear blue of the Pacific, and covered with gigantic trees. Backing up the whole is a long ridge of rugged and tumbled rock. In the center of this Titanic sweep nests Honolulu. To the east, the sweep is terminated by a tumbled mass of rock—an extinct volcano, known as Diamond Head. To the west the view ends with a frowning mountain that hides a beautiful little lake which nestles behind it, reached from the sea through a narrow passage, like the neck of a bottle—the lake named Pearl Harbor. Nowhere in the world is a scene more beautiful and impressive.

Death in the Midst of Beauty.

Uncle Sam's task has been to conceal, in this wonderful 15 miles of beauty, death—the flying, screaming, hellish death of flame and steel and explosive. He has packed the hollow cup of the peaceful, somnolent old Diamond Head crater full of coast-defense mortars, and the volcano may renew its activity with the eruptions of flame and steel that belch forth from the molten interiors of these stout, grim engines of destruction.

Hidden among the green of the trees are cement pits, from the depths of which long, trim, coast-defense rifles rise and peer about, seeking marks for the tons of steel and gunpowder they are hiding. Beneath, keeping company with the fishes, are hundreds of steel cans the size of barrels, and containing high explosives, ready to destroy any vessel riding above them when the man on shore chooses to launch their power.

Impregnable Defenses.

The fortifications extend along the coast for a distance of 15 miles, from the volcano on the east of Honolulu to Pearl Harbor, nine miles west of the city, and consist mainly of a series of powerful batteries occupying cemented emplacements beneath the level of the ground. At the base of the volcano is a group of such emplacements called Fort Ruger; at the other end, guarding the entrance to Pearl Harbor, is Fort Kamehameha.

PART OF PEARL HARBOR.

These defensive works cannot even be seen from the ocean, and it would be almost impossible for any hostile fleet to destroy or capture them, because there is really nothing above ground to hit.

The landward defenses, now nearly finished, consist of a series of formidable earthworks, and extend in the form of a crescent from Pearl Harbor on the west, where the naval base is located, to Honolulu. From Honolulu to Diamond Head on the east runs a mountain wall, affording a natural fortification that can hardly be surmounted by an enemy, in the face of the batteries of guns which have been established on its highest summits. The mortar battery in the volcanic crater thus terminates the line of landward defense as well as the line to the seaward.

The four mortars mounted in the volcano are stated to have an extreme range of nearly nine miles, and can carry accurately for six miles. They fire 12-inch shells weighing 700 pounds, and carrying loads of high explosives. Within the last few months they have been established in the crater, and they are now ready for business.

All the seacoast defenses are completed, and the guns mounted, except one 14-inch rifle, which will be shipped to Honolulu during the month of July. The carriage for it is ready and in place. One million dollars' worth of ammunition is stored in magazines on the island, and the forts are supplemented by a complete system of submarine mines controlled by electricity.

Pearl Harbor.

Pearl Harbor itself is a landlocked sheet of water covering 11 square miles, and with a depth of something like sixty feet over nearly all of this area. All the navies in the world could float on its surface, and its safety against attack may be judged from the fact that the only entrance to it is through a narrow neck three miles long and hardly more than wide enough to allow vessels to pass through.

The naval station occupies a square mile of land, and is one of the most completely equipped in the world. It is provided with a first-class ship-repairing outfit, including the largest dry dock in the world, and has a coaling plant that cost nearly $1,000,000, with a magazine for naval ammunition that tapped Uncle Sam's pocketbook for $400,000. There are five tanks for fuel oil, four of them containing 2,000,000 gallons each, and one with a capacity of 1,500,000 gallons—such provision being necessary in view of the fact that our newest dreadnaughts burn oil fuel.

Such fortifications, so manned, with a strong navy, will afford San Francisco even more protection than guns mounted about the Golden Gate.

JUST WHAT IS A GENTLEMAN?

Many Definitions Given, But None That Can Be Said to Be Satisfactory.

From more or less successful efforts to define the snob and the bore there is only a step to the more or less successful efforts to define the gentleman, says a writer in Scribner's. The bore and the snob are accusable creatures, plain to the view of all men and redoubtable to formula. But the gentleman is intangible and ultimately indefinable. The bore and the snob are revealed by their words and their deeds, whereas the gentleman can prove himself only by his spirit. It is no wonder that the multitudinous definitions shot at this shining mark have failed to pierce the center, even if one or another may now and again have hit the margin of the target.

One of the more obvious reasons for this diversity of definition is that the word has changed its meaning and is likely to keep on changing it as we advance in civilization. Once upon a time it had a clear and sharply limited legal content recorded by Blackstone in his commentaries; the great lawyer defined a gentleman as one "who bears coat armor, the grant of which adds gentility to one's family." This is still a fit definition of the gentleman in France; it is probably not now a fully satisfactory definition of the gentleman in Great Britain, and it never has been an acceptable definition of the gentleman in the United States. To an American there is a pitiful snobbishness in Ruskin's remark that the principles of education propounded by Plato apply only to "the persons we call gentlemen—that is to say, land holders living on slave labor." Yet Ruskin is only putting forth a little more offensively than others an opinion often held in England. This opinion is most concretely expressed in the fabled dialogue between the English lord and the American girl, which begins with his tactful assertion that there are so few gentlemen in America, to which she responded with the question: "But who do you call gentlemen?" And when he explains that gentlemen are "men who do not work," she retorts swiftly: "But we have lots of those in America—only we call them tramps!"

Divorce Problem in Tennessee.

The office of the circuit court clerk, where divorce suits are filed, was on the fourth floor of the court house, and the elevator was not running. Among the early stair-climbers was a big black mammy of nearly 300 pounds weight, and pulled along by the trousers a shriveled, shrinking old black man.

At the top of the first flight of steps, which was unusually long, she stopped and exclaimed, between puffs and blows: "Look a-here, nigger, I ain't a-gwine one step further! I've drug you th' forty-four years o' matrimony, an' I've drug you up all dese here stairs, I'd git dat divorce dis mornin', but I ain't gwine drag no runt of a nigger up to de fo'f f'lo' o' dis here co'te house, jes for de 'scial disruption o' de ties o' matrimony, bless Gawd!"

PROTECTING PUBLIC WATER SUPPLIES

All of the public water supplies in this State come directly under the supervision of the State Department of Health. Under the Act of 1906 water companies were required to file plans of existing systems, and whenever any additions are made or new sources of supply are required, the plans must first receive the approval of the Commissioner of Health, Samuel G. Dixon.

A bad source of water supply may readily become a menace to the entire community and it is necessary that a careful inspection be made of all new sheds and sources of supply before the Department will permit their use. The inspectors of the Department make careful field investigations and send in their reports to the State Department of Health at Harrisburg. After these investigations and a consideration of the plans, if the supply is considered safe, permits are issued by Doctor Dixon allowing the companies to proceed with the construction. This system is a protection to the public.

A Coral Earring

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

A man and a woman sat in an Italian restaurant in New York. At a near table sat a man with a pointed beard. The couple were speaking of Naples.

The man with the pointed beard sat gazing at a coral earring the woman wore with an evident interest. He also listened to the couple's conversation. When they turned their talk from Naples to Milan he raised his glass toward the man and said:

"Pardon me, signor; I am a citizen of Milan. Meeting one familiar with the place of my home, I cannot refrain from asking him to drink with me to the finest city in the world. I trust the signora will join me as well."

Both the man and the woman raised their glasses and drank to "the finest city in the world," and the proposer of the toast was invited to join them at their table. It was not long before they had become so pleased with each other that an exchange of cards was made. The man with the pointed beard was Andrea Michelli. The others were Signor and Signora Carelli. Michelli was familiar with all Italian cities except Naples, where he said he had never been. Carelli, though he admitted he had been there often, did not like the place, declaring it to be the worst city in the world.

"In what respect?" asked Michelli. "Criminality," was the reply. "Now I think of it," said Michelli, "not long ago our Milan journals were full of a murder in which a beautiful woman high in the social circle was made away with, and at the same time a lot of valuable jewels were taken."

While saying this Michelli fixed his eye on that of Signor Carelli. The latter returned it with the same fixedness till Michelli's gaze was removed; then the conversation fell into other channels. Michelli called a waiter and asked if he could bring a certain kind of wine from the south of Italy. The wine was brought, and the party drank to the king and queen of Italy, then pursued their chat, drifting over the peninsula for awhile, then taking up the manners and customs of the Americans.

Carelli drank very little wine, but the signora was not sparing of it. For this reason her husband was the more tactful of the two, and the chat was carried on between her and Michelli. "May I ask," he said, "where you got those coral earrings? I have never seen such beautiful carvings."

The woman before replying looked at her husband, then said that she had been given them by her mother and believed they had been cut in Paris.

"The reason I am interested in them," said Michelli, "is that my wife has some corals which I have always supposed came from Naples. In fact, I have been told that the most beautiful work done in corals is executed in that city. Would you mind permitting me to examine them?"

The woman looked again at her husband for instructions. He was very pale, but said nothing. It seemed that his wife felt the request to be an order. At any rate, she reluctantly took off one of her earrings and handed it to Michelli. He examined it admiringly, then asked for its mate. The woman hesitated, looked up at Michelli as if surprised at such a request, then handed him what he had asked for. He looked at the two together and said:

"These are not mates."

"Indeed!" said the woman with genuine surprise, then, turning to her husband, asked if he had ever suspected what the signor said.

Carelli seemed too much agitated to reply.

"I thought," said Michelli, "that you got them from your mother?"

Both the woman and the man were now visibly agitated. Michelli took out a wallet, from which he drew forth a coral earring, the exact mate to the finer of the two shown him by the woman.

"Giuseppe Riccardoni," he said, "I came to America for the express purpose of taking you back to Naples. I am not a Milan merchant, but a member of the carabinieri and attached to the Naples force. This woman is not your wife, for it was your wife, in Naples who put me on your track. When you give jewels that you have gained by murder to a woman it would be safer for you to give them to your wife."

The man addressed sat as if crushed. The woman was scarcely less moved. She sat looking at the man, he at vacancy.

"Will you go with me," asked Michelli, "or must we have a scene?" The man made no reply. The carabinieri took a pair of bracelets from his pocket, kept them concealed and said:

"You and I can walk out side by side, and no one need know that we are linked together."

Slowly the man lowered his wrist and received the bracelet. Then the three walked out of the restaurant, and when the street was reached the officer called a cab, and all were driven away.

By the time the climax to this little drama was enacted the restaurant was filled to overflowing, but no one there dreamed that the three persons leaving the restaurant were going to Italy to enact the end of one of the most important murder cases in the history of Naples.

COMING CONCERT

Ladies of College League Prepare for Fine Attraction.

The following committee has been appointed to make all arrangements for the concert by the Manhattan Ladies' Quartet on January 29 in Bruns Chapel, Mrs. Sanders, Mrs. True, Mrs. Ashworth, Mrs. Shipperd, Mrs. Stahl, and Mrs. Wing. It will be given for the benefit of the Y. M. C. A. building fund. The company has been secured only by special arrangement and because of their desire to stop at Gettysburg on their tour to the Pacific Coast. They have a reputation which extends not only over this country but in Europe as well, and hold the same position in the vocal world as the Kneisel Quartet does in the instrumental.

First "Push Button."

Benjamin Franklin invented the electric "push button." This was accomplished in 1751. He "shocked" the railing in front of his Philadelphia residence, finding the idlers of the street were too fond of gathering under his window. This so alarmed them that they no longer gave the philosopher offense.

Points of View.

There is one matter on which wives and husbands probably never will agree. The wife forever will insist that the idiot at the organ played the wedding march too fast, and the husband will argue that the blamed rumsnkull lagged along until he thought he never was going to get down the aisle.

Excessive Talking.

The excessive talking in which many girls indulge is a decided element of nervous strain. I have heard of a "silence club," the members of which try to refrain from all unnecessary talking. Gushing and useless chattering is against the principle of this club. It has been said that the Japanese girls preserve their youthfulness far longer than their American sisters. They live quiet lives and do not waste their words.

The Multiple Salesman

The newspaper is the multiple salesman.

Its appeal is universal. Its friendliness with all members of the family unequalled.

It reaches all classes. It appeals to all retailers because it produces a direct demand among people who are possible customers—his friends.

The newspaper advertisement is the message that goes every day to every buyer of every product, everywhere. It wins the interest of the prospective customer, and then it turns that interest into an actual sale by pointing out the counter where the product desired is found. That is direct demand—the straight line drawn between producer and consumer through the retailer's store.

And that is why the retailer—himself a newspaper reader—invariably prefers to sell and to push newspaper advertised products.

KILLS HIS AGED FATHER

Don Shot Parent When He Attacked Mother With a Pick.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 4.—William T. Duff, forty-nine years old, shot and killed his father, Thomas Duff, seventy-one years old, at a mining hamlet, four miles west of Bridgeville, in a remote part of Allegheny county.

William walked two miles to the home of Dr. H. H. Rittenhouse, at Federal, and said: "I have shot my father, in defence of my mother, and I want to give myself up."

Dr. Rittenhouse drove out to the Duff home and found the old man with a bullet in his neck. William surrendered.

Mrs. Duff corroborates her son, both told how the elder Duff had been drinking and that he had attacked his wife with a miner's pick when the son fired at him.

Y. M. C. A. MEN DRILL

New York Company Said to be Part of Plan to Enroll 500,000.

New York, Jan. 4.—One hundred members of the East Side branch of the Young Men's Christian association have enrolled in a company for military training. It was announced.

"This is the first step in a plan by this branch to have the more than 500,000 Y. M. C. A. members through the country formed into an army reserve."

The general plan for the reserve has been passed upon by Major General Leonard A. Wood, commander of the department of the east. It was said.

While a considerable portion of the training work is expected to be done in gymnasiums and armories, city authorities have indicated that streets and parks may be made available.

PLAN FORCE TO RESIST
FOES IN PAN-AMERICATwo-Power Navy and Great Army
to Meet Attacks.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Possibility of a combined attack by two foreign powers to break down the new Pan-American doctrine evolved from maintenance by the United States, and acceptance by South and Central American republicans, of the Monroe doctrine, is one of the fundamental bases for the national defense plans formulated by army and navy strategists.

They believe it essential in the formulation of a national military policy, it was learned, to provide against the possibility of an assault upon the doctrine by either an Asiatic or European power, or even by an alliance of two such powers, which might bring forces simultaneously at the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

A navy equal in strength to those of any two world powers, except Great Britain, and an army prepared to fight for the integrity of the Pan-American idea anywhere in Pan-America, is the ultimate aim of the military experts. Ten years is the time the navy general board believes the United States has in which to prepare for a readjustment of world forces, which will follow the European war. In setting 1925 as the time when the United States navy should equal any assault which means reaching the two-power standard of the British navy—the board estimated much time would elapse before the shock of the present war passed sufficiently to permit any of the belligerents to look to South or Central America for colonial development or trade aggression.

"Wilson and Marshall," Indiana Ticket
Washington, Jan. 4.—Petitions to place Vice President Marshall's name on the ticket for the vice-presidential nomination in the Indiana primary will be filed by friends here on January 7, and later will be filed in other states. President Wilson's name will be filed for renomination in Indiana at the same time. The vice president's friends here say he will make no active campaign, but that filing petitions in his behalf will be done with his approval.

U. S. to Bring Runaway Home.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The state department cabled instructions to the American consul at Genoa to arrange for the transportation home of Frank M. Hoover, a Charlotte, N. C., boy who ran away from home in October and has just been located at Genoa.

CALLS PRESIDENT HOME

Secretary of State Lansing Asks Vienna Locality of Submarine That Sank Vessel, Killing American Consul McNeely.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The sinking of a submarine in the Mediterranean sea, of the British steamship Persia, with the loss of more than 200 lives, including that of Robert Ney McNeely, recently appointed United States consul to Aden, has created a situation of such serious aspect that President Wilson has decided to cut short his honeymoon and return to Washington.

It was stated authoritatively that the destruction of the liner, with loss of American life, had increased the gravity of the relations between the United States and the Teutonic powers to such an extent that the president considered it necessary to return to the White House at once for conferences with Secretary of State Lansing and other members of the cabinet to shape the course of the government.

Mr. Lansing has announced that he has instructed Ambassador Penhall, in Vienna, to ask the Austrian government for any information it might have which would aid in establishing the nationality of the submarine which sank the Persia.

Heron von Zwiedinck, charge of the Austrian embassy, assured Secretary Lansing that should it be found an Austrian submarine destroyed the Persia with loss of American life, his government would promptly give reparation and satisfaction. He asked that judgment be suspended until all the facts were known.

Consuls and consular agents in the vicinity of Alexandria were instructed to gather advisories from the Persia survivors and any others which might throw light on the situation. Everywhere in Washington, in official and diplomatic circles, and at the capital the situation was viewed as most critical and fraught with possibility of grave eventualities.

Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee, conferred with Secretary Lansing at the secretary's invitation. He admitted that the submarine crisis had been discussed, and that he expected to confer with President Wilson, but said he did not know whether the crisis would be considered by the foreign relations committee "just yet."

There seemed to be a growing impression in official quarters that the president may call the congress leaders together and acquaint them fully with the situation.

PERSIA CARRIED GUNS

Dead on British Vessel Placed as High as 392.

London, Jan. 4.—Announcement was made by the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation company that the steamship Persia carried guns when she was torpedoed on Thursday.

The loss of life is still a matter of doubt, various reports of the dead ranging from 200 to as high as 392. It is believed here that the total loss was well above 300. The passengers numbered more than 200, and there were between 200 and 300 members of the crew.

Latest advices from Cairo and Alexandria indicate that 158 survivors have been hailed, of whom fifty-nine were passengers and twelve in the first cabin. Hope that others may have been saved is diminishing, as five days have elapsed since the vessel was destroyed.

No further word has been received concerning Robert N. McNeely, American consul at Aden, Arabia, and there seems little doubt that he was drowned. The safety of Charles Grant, of Boston, having been established, it is thought Mr. Neely was the only American who perished.

Typhus Ravages Mexico City.

New York, Jan. 4.—Typhus, in fully as serious proportions as in Serbia, is prevalent in Mexico City, and unless checked will go down as one of the great plagues of history. This is the statement made by a New York business man just returned from Mexico City. His name cannot be given as he wishes to return. He said there was over 30,000 cases in the city and hundreds of deaths daily.

THE GHOST ON THE STAIRCASE

A Romantic Incident of the Spanish-American War.

During my college days our family lived in Washington, and as they left it before the beginning and returned after the close of the war I was not there in vacations. During this period I understood that my sister had a love affair, but since she was older than I and I was at an age when neither my sympathy nor my judgment was in demand very little was said to me about the affair.

A few years later the Spanish-American war broke out, and I, being a lieutenant in the national guard, went out to fight the dons. In the very first encounter in which I took part I was wounded and taken prisoner. I had the good fortune to be located near one of the best Spanish hospitals, to which I was taken and treated with every attention. One morning the officer of the day went through the ward where I was lying in company with the surgeon. When the officer passed my bed I noticed that my face caught his attention. Indeed, he stared at me as if he had known me before. The next day I received a basket of fruit to which was attached the card of Major Adelberto Angelo.

Major Angelo came to see me every day after that and loaded me with attentions. Naturally I became very fond of him. I endeavored to gain from him the cause of his having noticed me and of his attentions, but failed slightly. He declared that it was the result of fancy. The intimacy lasted five weeks, at the end of which time I was discharged from the hospital and very soon after exchanged.

The next time I saw Angelo he was lying mortally wounded on the battlefield. We were pressing the Spaniards before Santiago, and, having cleared a way directly in front of our regiment with a Gatling gun, we pushed forward over a field. Stepping over what I supposed was a corpse, I glanced down to be sure that I should not touch it and looked into the livid face of Major Angelo. It was not permissible for me to leave my company, but I did. Stopping, I raised his head. Angelo opened his eyes, and a loving smile told me that he recognized me. I saw him try to move his lips to speak, but the effort was a failure. Then he fell back—dead.

I went home, like most of my comrades, sick, but it was not long before I was on my feet again and joined the family in October in Washington. My sister had for some time been going into a decline, and my mother forbade me to excite her with accounts of my war experiences, especially my stay in hospital. When I went into Adele's room to greet her after my long and eventful absence I was puzzled at the look she gave me. It was a hungry look, a look as if I might have news to tell her that she longed to hear. I was shocked at her appearance and saw that she was doomed. She wished me to talk about the war, but I agreed with my mother that it would not be well to do so, and, though Adele kept turning to it, I held to other topics. Indeed, on account of my sister's condition, I was not asked to recount war's horrors, as most of my comrades were, and I was glad of it.

One day I was sitting by Adele's bed chatting with her on ordinary topics when she said suddenly: "You were wounded and taken to a hospital when you were in Cuba, weren't you?" "Yes."

"And a Spaniard was very kind to you?" "Yes. But you have heard nothing about it from me or from father or mother, because I have not told them a word about it. How did you come to?"

At the moment mother came into the room and broke in upon my question. The next time I was alone with Adele I endeavored to reopen the subject, but an expression passed over her face that warned me to desist, and I never referred to it again.

One evening between day and dark I was passing through the lower hall when I saw a figure of a man come in at the front door. Since his back was to the light, I could hardly see his face, but it was familiar. He appeared to be a gentleman and walked through the hall as if perfectly familiar with the premises. For this reason, I did not regard him as a thief, but permitted him to go where he liked, following him from a distance. He mounted the staircase, and I noticed that though there was but the bare wood to walk on his step was so light that I did not hear it. He was considerably in advance of me and had turned and disappeared down the upper hall before I reached the top of the staircase.

When I did reach it he was nowhere to be seen. He must have entered some room on that floor, and since Adele's was one of them I hurried toward it, just before reaching her door, which stood open, I heard the word, spoken in a voice familiar to me: "Come."

Entering the room, the fading light coming through a window showed me Major Angelo raising Adele in his arms. I passed my hands before my eyes to clear my vision, and when I had done so I saw Adele lying alone, stiff and stark. She was dead.

A few days later my mother told me that Adele's affair of the heart was with Senator Adelberto Angelo, who was at the time an attaché of the Spanish legation.

POWDER HOUSE PERILS.

A "Jag" Without Whisky and a Weir Nervous Disorder.

Alcohol is greatly feared by the powder people, and rightly so. But they cannot eliminate a strange malady that appears among their workmen in the powder mills. As subterranean labor in compressed air produces "the bends," work in the powder mills creates the "powder house jag," which is described as follows by Merle Crowell in the American Magazine.

A powder house is no place for an untidy hand or an unseeing eye. But the "powder house jag," a freak product of the plants themselves, is something which no amount of diligence can forefend. Large quantities of alcohol are used in the making of smokeless powder, and the air in the shops frequently gets heavy with its fumes. Men have been known to leave the plants reeling and stupefied, while one serious accident was caused because a fume-fuddled workman threw on both the high pressure and low pressure brakes at the same time.

A weird nervous disorder that steals upon powder makers has been called "powderitis." Treading all day with rubber sole shoes in a shop which a vagrant spark will change into a crater, they get keyed up to a nervous tension that never runs down, with the result that even when off duty they nearly jump through their collars at an unexpected flash of light. Although powder, unless it is confined, does not explode at a spark under normal conditions, a powder shop may be changed into an inferno of wildfire in a few seconds.

Window Glass.

It is certain that there were glass windows in Pompeii, as the proof is found in its ruins. In more modern times it is known that windows of some kind were glazed so early as the third century, if not before, though the fashion was not fairly introduced until it was done by Benedict Biscop about 674. Windows of glass were used in private houses in Italy as early as 1177.—Exchange.

How to Use a Thermometer.

In most cases a thermometer hung in the fresh air will not give the actual temperature of the air, because it may be subjected to the direct rays of the sun and because radiation from the thermometer can take place unimpeded. Probably the best way to expose a thermometer in order to determine the temperature of the air is to hang it in a shelter so made that air may blow freely through it. A good result may be obtained also by rapidly whirling the thermometer in any out door shade.

QUIZZING THE CHEMIST.

Curious and Amusing Experience of Sir Hiram Maxim.

Having occasion to use some metallic mercury in his London laboratory, Sir Hiram Maxim sent his man, Silverman, out to purchase "one pound of metallic mercury in a strong glass bottle with a cork stopper." In "My life" he tells the story of what happened.

Silverman soon returned and said that he could not find any metallic mercury. I asked him whether he had tried at a shoe shop or a beer shop.

"No," he replied, "at a wholesale chemist's."

I told him he must have made a mess of it somehow, and I sat down and wrote out carefully, "Wanted—One pound of metallic mercury in a strong glass bottle with a cork stopper."

Before long he came back and said that there was no such stuff as "metallic mercury" known in the chemist's shop and that he had been to a wholesale place. As the shop was not more than 200 yards away, I went around with him and said to the man behind the counter:

"I have sent this young man here twice for some metallic mercury, and he tells me that you have nothing of the kind."

"No, we never have any call for it," he replied.

"But is not this a chemist's shop?" "Yes; one of the largest in London."

"Do you sell all kinds of chemicals?" "Yes."

"Then how does it happen that you have no metallic mercury?" "We have never had any call for it before. We do not know what it is."

"Have you any bicarbonate of soda?" "Yes; tons of it."

"Have you any bicarbonate of potash?" "Certainly; any amount of it."

"What is bicarbonate of potash a bicarbonate of?" "Why, naturally of potash."

"Could you let me have some potash before it is made up into a bicarbonate?" "Certainly."

"Have you any bichloride of mercury?" "Yes; lots of it."

"What is bichloride of mercury a bichloride of?" Here I had him. I asked him if it were his first day on duty.

"No; I have been here twenty years." The head man, who had overheard our conversation, then came up and said, "Why, of course the gentleman wants quicksilver."

Curiously enough, it had never occurred to me to call it by that name, although I ought to have thought of it. However, it is never called quicksilver by scientific men.

Opportunities.

Life, your life and mine, the humblest and most prosaic life, is filled, crowded, with the most beautiful, the most glorious opportunities; even the seamy side of it is jeweled with splendid chances of manhood and womanhood; every day and every hour the good angels of our destiny are whispering, singing, shouting their invitations in our ears to take from the open hand of time treasures of immortal worth.—Washington Glad den.

Enthusiasm.

Enthusiasm is always connected with the senses, whatever be the object that excites it. The true strength of virtue is serenity of mind combined with a deliberate and steadfast determination to execute her laws. That is the healthful condition of the moral life; on the other hand, enthusiasm, even when excited to representations of goodness, is a brilliant but feverish glow which leaves only exhaustion and languor behind.—Kant.

Wise Provision.

Not long ago some farmers had occasion to organize a corporation, and, desiring to avoid the cost of a lawyer's service, they drew up their own articles of agreement. Among its provisions was the following: "The annual meeting of the company shall be held on the second Saturday of July in each and every year, except when same falls on a Sunday or a holiday."

Chronic Discouragers.

It is really very curious to observe how, even in modern times, the acts of discouragement prevail. There are men whose sole pretence to wisdom consists in administering discouragement. They are never at a loss. They are equally ready to prophesy, with wonderful ingenuity, all possible varieties of misfortune to any enterprise that is proposed; and when the thing is produced, and has met with some success, to find a flaw in it.—Hilps.

THE SALAD BOWL.

POINSETTIA SALAD.—Place a lettuce leaf on a salad plate and lay a thin, round slice of corned pineapple on it. Cover the pineapple with grated cream cheese. Cut a sweet pineapple in diamond shaped pieces an inch long, arrange the pieces from the middle of the pineapple, points out, to look like the poinsettia blossom. Have a cold mayonnaise into which has been a half its bulk of whipped cream. Put a spoonful of this mayonnaise in the center of the salad and sprinkle with a dash of paprika.

Belgian Fruit Salad.—One-half pound white California grapes, two oranges, three bananas, English walnuts or pecan nuts, one head lettuce, French dressing. Peel oranges and remove pulp separately from each section. Peel bananas and cut in slices. Remove skins and seeds from grapes. Break nuts in pieces. Mix prepared ingredients and arrange on lettuce leaves. Serve with French dressing.

Delicious Salad.—Six medium sized cold boiled potatoes, three boiled beets, a small onion, a small cucumber and any other cooked vegetables left from dinner, dried together. Mix with following dressing: A teaspoonful of mustard, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, a quarter teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of flour, blended into a tablespoonful of soft butter, a well beaten egg.

a third cupful of milk, a quarter cupful of vinegar. Cook in double boiler until thick. Have all ingredients ice cold and mixed some time before serving, so as to be well blended. Serve on lettuce leaves garnished with hard boiled eggs. Sufficient for five.

Lettuce With Roquefort Dressing.—Mix thoroughly three tablespoonfuls of olive oil, a tablespoonful of vinegar, one-third teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper and a dash of cayenne; then add slowly three tablespoonfuls of Roquefort cheese. Arrange crisp lettuce on individual salad plates and pour the dressing over them.

GIVE HIM WORKING PARTY.

Twenty-four Neighbors Donate Day's Labor Each to Injured Farmer.

Vernie Connor, a farmer of Clarksville, Ia., recently suffered a broken leg in a fall and has been unable to do work since. The other day twenty-four able-bodied men of the neighborhood joined in giving Connor a free day's work. They husked and shocked his corn and repaired his fences.

The women of the neighborhood also lent a helping hand to Mrs. Connor, whose household had suffered somewhat because of the attention demanded by her husband.

In Crepe Georgette and Faille.

Simple and lovely is this truck of figured crepe Georgette, having a skirt finished with a deep ruffle of faille. It is designed for afternoon wear.

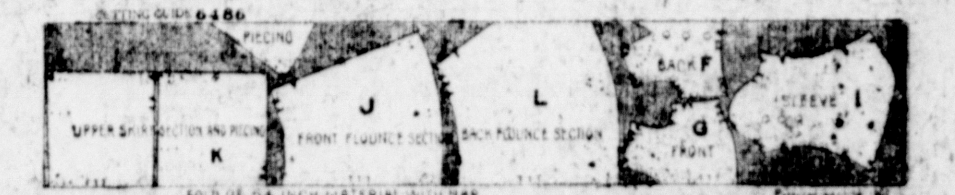

Some of the most charming frocks of the season show combinations of sheer, soft crepe Georgette and shimmering faille, the silk of service and beauty. In this design the two materials are used most effectively. The upper section of the skirt, the blouse and the sleeves are of the crepe, while the deep flounce is of the faille. In medium size the frock requires 3 yards 40-inch faille and 4 yards 36-inch crepe Georgette. If made entirely of voile, broadcloth or wider material 4 yards 44 inches wide will be required. When made of narrower fabrics it is necessary to cut the skirt flounces on an open width of the goods, piecing the side. The upper sections and the waists, however, may be cut from a fold of the material.

If 44-inch material is used all of the sections of the pattern may be laid on the goods after it has been folded in half so that they will be cut in duplicate. The pieces that are laid on the lengthwise fold are the upper skirt, the front and back flounce sections and the front of the waist. The piecing for the upper skirt section will have to be divided so that a part may be added to each side of said section. The piecing for the back flounce is laid along the selvage edge of the goods, while the back and sleeve are cut on a lengthwise thread.

If the underbody is desired with a V-shaped neck, cut out the front and back on indicating small "o" perforations. The double "o" perforations indicate a round neckline. Cut off the front edge of outer front on triple "ooo" perforations, if the waist is desired with open front. The double "o" perforations on the gathered sleeve show how it may be cut off for shorter length, while single "o" perforations are placed on the sleeve flange for the same purpose.

Satin cords may be used over the rows of shirring at the waist, but these look best on slender figures. A band of insertion, with edging to match, finishes the neck.

CURIOUS ANDORRA

Oldest, Smallest and Strangest of All Republics.

A PATCH IN THE PYRENEES.

This Tiny Nation, Where All Men Are Really Equal, Has Never Produced a Page of Literature, a Bar of Music, a Painting Nor a Leader of Men.

For 1,100 years, since its foundation as a republic in 805 (and no one knows for how many centuries before that), curious little Andorra has gone its own strange way utterly oblivious to the progress of the other nations of Europe. It has its own idea of the meaning of life, and it lives according to that. A traveler entering the republic today will find it exactly as it was 1,100 years ago.

It is a republic which has never achieved anything in its long and vague history; a republic which has never produced a page of literature nor a bar of music nor a painting; a republic which has never had a place in the councils of Europe and has never asked for one; a nation which has never produced an ambitious man.

Andorra consists of six counties and boasts about a dozen towns. Its entire population is 5,000 souls.

The chief occupation of the people of Andorra is cattle raising, and thousands upon thousands of cows may be seen browsing in the rich pastures, yet it has never occurred to Andorrans to milk these cows, and butter and milk are unknown in the republic. Dairy products are nonexistent. The only cheese made is that from the milk of sheep. Visitors find it impossible to procure milk or cream for their coffee. Andorrans themselves use brandy instead and think it is better than anything else in coffee.

In 805 Louis the Debonair laid siege to the city of Urgel, which is to the south of Andorra. The Andorrans, led by Marc Almugaver, took up arms to aid the French, and for their assistance Louis gave them a charter and permitted them to be self governing.

As it now exists it is the smallest republic in the world. It is situated in the Pyrenees between France and Spain. It is about eighteen miles wide and sixteen miles long from north to south. It is difficult of access, as there is not a single railroad running through or near it.

Its capital is Andorra la Viella, with a population of 500 and containing the Casa de la Vall, or house of representatives. This is a large sixteenth century building at the extremity of the town, overlooking the valley toward Spain. It is parliament house, town hall, school, palace of justice and hotel for the councilors all in one. It is also used as a temporary prison in the rare cases when a prison is necessary. Crime in Andorra is practically unknown. The only Andorrans suffering imprisonment are the smugglers of tobacco caught by the French or Spanish custom officers, and these are not looked upon as malefactors by their fellow citizens. Smuggling is regarded as a legitimate trade.

There is no police department and no police. Every citizen has the power to arrest, but this privilege is rarely used.

The territory was once densely wooded and is said to derive its name from the Moorish Albarra, "the place thick with trees," but almost all the forests have been destroyed for fuel. The climate is generally cold, with very severe winters. The land is chiefly devoted to grazing for the numerous flocks and herds. But on the sheltered southern slopes it is carefully cultivated and produces grain, potatoes, fruit and tobacco. The local industries are of the most primitive kind and show little or no advance since the middle ages.

The only roads are bridle paths, with the exception of one municipal road connecting Andorra with the high road to Seo de Urgel and Mantreso by way of the Balira valley.

Andorra is perhaps the truest democracy in the world. There is no nobility, and there is no class distinctions. All men are equal, not only in the eyes of the law but in the fullest sense of the word. The first citizen of the land, the president, is a farmer.

The republic is governed by twenty-four representatives, elected every four years. These representatives choose one of their number as president of the republic. His salary is 80 pesetas a year, or $20. Representatives get 10 pesetas, or $2.50 a year.

There is no such thing as poverty in Andorra. Every one has enough and has no desire for any more. Though they are hard drinkers, cases of intoxication are very rare. They speak their own language, Andorran, but French is taught at the schools. The school system is regulated by the French, and for this service Andorra pays annually to the French government 900 francs, or $180. From this it may be seen that taxation is very low. Doctors' services are absolutely free, and drug stores supply their patrons without charge.

Andorrans drink a great deal, and they are untidy in their personal appearance. But they are extremely honest, and theft is unknown in the country. Though descended from an ancient race, they are not good looking. Their faces are hard and uncomely, but that is because their lives are hard. The women work beside the men in the field, and feminine leisure and paint and powder are unknown.—New York Sun

The inspections will begin immediately and will include public institutions, jails, and almshouses, as well as hospitals. The entire State is divided into four sections and Edward Wilson is named as the inspector for the one in which Adams County has been placed.

Other counties in Division Number Three are, York, Cumberland, Perry, Dauphin, Lebanon, Berks, Schuylkill, Northumberland, Snyder, Juniata, Mifflin, Union, Lycoming, Montour, Columbia, Luzerne, Sullivan, Bradford, Tioga, Franklin.

In addition Mrs. E. V. S. Middleton, special agent, will inspect all homes, asylums, and institutions caring for children and aged persons. Mrs. Middleton is well known here, having been a frequent visitor to the county to place children in private homes.

STRICKER WANTS MORE

Marcus' Pitcher Demands Higher Wages for this Year.

This from the pen of the sporting writer of the Chambersburg Repository:

"Kid" Stricker wants to play baseball this year but says he will not sign a contract at the salary he was paid last season. "I must have more money or my release," he said, "I will not pitch for as little as I got last year."

Steinbach advises friends here that he does not want to play ball in Hanover but merely wants to be released that he may quit playing. Come off, Eddie. You need no release to quit. We believe Steinbach will get a job here in Chambersburg and play here.

In Advance.

Robert was visiting in a large city and was greatly excited over the prospect of going to see a big toy department the next day. When he was getting ready for bed he hugged his father with unusual vigor. "Daddy" was pleased and said, "That's very nice." Robert said: "Well, that's for two days. I am going to see the toys, and will have no time to love you tomorrow."

Poor Idea.

A man who employed a number of boys to pick raspberries was quite anxious to protect them from mosquitoes, so he had veils made to tie down around the neck. The boys were very grateful for his kindness until they found that there were no mosquitoes in that locality and also that they couldn't eat any berries with those veils on. The "protection" was of another sort.

Sick? Nonsense!

The ocean liner was rolling like a chip, but as usual in such instances one passenger was aggressively, disgustingly healthy. "Sick, eh?" he remarked to a pale-green person who was leaning on the rail. The pale-green person regarded the healthy one with all the scorn he could muster. "Sick nothing!" he snorted weakly. "I'm just hanging over the front of the boat to see how the captain cranks it!"

Imitation Snails.

The demand for edible snails has become such that a curious imitation of them has been developed in Paris. The snail farmers collect the empty shells which have accumulated during the summer, clean them and sell them for about twenty-five cents a thousand. The shells are sent to Paris, where they are filled with a mixture of snail flesh, liver, butter and herbs.

Holidays.

If the amusements of men are as varied as their trades, they are seldom so well managed, and often as exacting. To replace one frown by another is all that a holiday does for far too many people nowadays. Something of the bitter competition as well as the hurry of business seems to have invaded the sacred hours of idleness.

ATLANTIC Rayolight OIL

—and the bath is shining clean

When the wind blows c-o-l-d!

It is liable to make your favorite nook a pretty shivery spot. But, with a Perfect Smokeless Heater in the house, cold need have no terrors. It will warm and keep any room warm and comfortable, in spite of the coldest, rawest wind.

Gives out the most heat, at the least expense, when filled with Atlantic Rayolight Oil. Inquire at your dealer's.

Every trace of dirty, soapy water gone—the porcelain white and clean. Simple and practical, isn't it?

Surprising the number of ways Atlantic Rayolight Oil does help keep the home bright, cheery and clean. Thousands of careful housekeepers tell us (as a result of our advertised request) that Atlantic Rayolight Oil is the very best thing for such purposes as polishing windows and mirrors, brightening up linoleum and restoring dull and faded carpets.

Of course, for this kind of work, the very finest kerosene is needed; that's why these experienced, competent women use

ATLANTIC Rayolight OIL

And it's ever so much better for purposes of lighting and heating.

You see it burns slowly and economically, yielding an intense, constant, steady heat without a jot of smoke or smell. A steady, flickerless, soft, white light beams from almost any lamp in which it is burned, but to get the best and most light for the least money, use a Rayo Lamp filled with Atlantic Rayolight Oil.

You buy it certain that it will give the greatest heat, the finest light and that careful refining makes it best for household purposes. But, with all these advantages, Atlantic Rayolight Oil costs no more than the unknown, unreliable kind.

Ask your dealer for it by name—

Are You Envious?

Envy is the weakness of small natures. It is the people with cramped souls who feel that whatever others get in the way of admiration robs them of their due. It is the hardest thing in the world to weed out envy. To get rid of it, outgrow it.

Hear the Voice Within.

Why should we ever go abroad, even across the way, to ask a neighbor's advice? There is a nearer neighbor within us, incessantly telling us how we should behave. But we wait for the neighbor without to tell us of some false, easier way.—Thoreau.

ATTORNEY MAKES MASTERFUL PLEA

Feature of Final Morning Session in Murder Trial. Attorney Benner's Address a Notable One. Case Nears its Close.

The plea made before the jury this morning in behalf of Oliver Sharrah by his counsel, Mr. Benner, was one of the most eloquent addresses delivered in the Adams County Court. It showed the rare presence of the finished speaker and a continuity of story that was remarkable when it is considered that there was no reference to notes.

Mr. Benner spoke for nearly two hours and reviewed vividly the various scenes, described by witnesses, that led up to the murder. His plea was that of self defense. The element of sympathy, while mentioned, was not emphasized, but the matter of justification was described with detail and force.

In his preliminary remarks he referred to the length of time the case had taken and said it had been most carefully conducted. He expressed regret in being compelled to paint the victim "in colors in which he showed himself during life, especially when he has since been before a Judge, who requires no accuser." He declared that among the array of counsel for the Commonwealth was employed every district attorney who had held that office within the past twenty five years; men who were trained in the prosecution, and who had back of them all the resources of the state.

The case, he stated, depended upon three principal characters, described by the prosecution as "laughing Pete Deardorff, the roistering, honest free-spending, general good fellow; Sharrah, a man of weak morals and lacking in the principals of manhood; and the woman—Mrs. Sharrah." As the defense showed Deardorff, said Mr. Benner, he was a man with lust in his heart and liquor in his brain, a robust bully with a profound contempt of the man whose wife he betrayed. Sharrah was comparatively a weakling, a man without strong purpose and afraid of his life at the hands of Deardorff. Mrs. Sharrah acceded to Deardorff's overtures with consent, if not with pleasure.

In submitting their side to the jury, it was said, they were called upon to pass upon two main questions, namely: the mental and physical attitude of Deardorff at the actual time of the shooting, with reference to his intentions, his gestures and posture, together with the imminence of attack; Sharrah's mental attitude when he knew he was in danger of assault, and his contemplation of Deardorff having a weapon in his possession.

The preceding events involved were then taken up in detail to allow the jury to determine the state of affairs at the Sharrah house on that fatal night. No incident favorable to the side of the defendant in the long examination of witnesses was overlooked and they were played upon with a full realization of their effectiveness.

The realistic picturization of Deardorff's mental attitude upon the night of the murder, "with a heart filled with lust and a mind befogged with liquor that induced an effort to seduce the wife before the eyes of the husband," for the first time since the start of the proceedings brought tears to the eyes of the man on trial for his life. His aged mother, sitting in the audience, hid her face behind her hands while the wife maintained her composure and apparent disregard that she has affected from the beginning.

The address was brought to a close by the allusion to Sharrah's attitude upon the stand and the degree of consistency that he showed at all times

GRIP MAKES MAN COMMIT SUICIDE

Only Reason Assigned for Rash Act of York County Farmer. Shot himself and Cut his Throat with Razor.

Franklin P. Lloyd, 65 years old, a widely known cigar manufacturer and farmer, of York County, committed suicide Thursday afternoon, following an aggravated attack of gripe which continued for three weeks, by shooting himself in the abdomen and slashing himself across the throat, severing the windpipe. Either wound would have been sufficient to produce death.

Lloyd chose as a time to end his life when his wife and son, David, were in the barn at work. He went to the rear of the tobacco shed, back of the barn, and placing a revolver against his body, presumably directed at his heart, discharged it. The aim proved poor, and Lloyd then with a razor, with which he had shaved himself during the afternoon slashed himself across the throat. This effort was not bungled and death took place almost instantly.

Mrs. Lloyd and son, David, had left him in the house when they went to the barn, the former to milk the cows, and the son to feed the stock. These two and a son, Daniel, living across the way from his father's residence ran to the house when they heard the revolver shot. Not finding Lloyd there they began a search and he was discovered by David lying in the snow at the rear of the tobacco shed.

He leaves his wife and six children.

A DIME SHOWER

And it Reached a Total of Fifty Dollars.

The Times told earlier in the week that Rev. J. R. Hutchison, formerly of this place, on Sunday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the work of the Christian ministry. A further account tells of the way his friends helped him to observe the day. A surprise came in the way of a dime shower. Dimes came to the clergyman's residence until they made the sum of $50.

Along with them came about 220 letters and post cards, many of them from members of the New Cumberland congregation (who contributed $42 of the $50 in dimes) and some from outside the congregation.

Sunday night, Rev. Mr. Hutchison attended the service in the United Brethren church and was called upon for a brief address. When he told the 500 people that the dime shower amounted to $50, the large congregation burst into applause.

SHORTAGE IN STAMPS

William F. Benchoff, Hagerstown, Post Office Clerk, Missing.

Official confirmation of a shortage in the general stamp account at the Hagerstown post office was made Thursday by Post Office Inspector E. Partridge, of Washington, who, with another inspector, made an investigation. The shortage amounts to $1,120.

William F. Benchoff, stamp clerk, has been missing since January 17. Inspector Partridge stated that the department would like to locate Benchoff, who left on a nine days' leave of absence and has not returned. The missing stamps were in 1 and 2 cent denominations.

NO CLUES HELD TO DYNAMITERS

Bold Yeggmen Make Good their Escape from Mount Holly Springs and their Capture is Regarded as Improbable.

Unless Federal detectives called to the scene have more information than has so far been made public, little additional is known as to the whereabouts of the daring dynamiters who early Wednesday morning blew the safe at the Mt Holly post office and escaped with money and stamps.

Wednesday afternoon Inspector Crawford, Mechanicsburg, and two men from Philadelphia arrived at Mount Holly and began checking up the damage. Miss Alice Mullin, the postmistress, said that the loss would be less than $300.

The robbers seemed to know what was valuable, she said. They did not bother to go through the mail, and took only cash and regular issue stamps. Postal savings stamps were in the safe but these were laid to one side without being taken.

The long start given the men may militate against their capture. They had five hours start before the first alarm was given and it was nearly twelve hours after the explosion that the Federal men began tracing the damage.

While some persons in Mount Holly are of the belief that the robbers were possibly persons living in or near the town, the officers are said to think it was the work of professionals. The fact that the men came seemingly on an anniversary, that they followed the same tactics as on the former occasion, and that they went about their work in a calm manner without paying the slightest attention to what the residents might do, seems to establish the fact that they were criminals of a high order. They were doubtless well armed and hoped to be able to get away before a party could be organized to stop them. Further, their knowledge of what was and what was not easily convertible into money seems to establish a knowledge of this sort of work.

The suspicion is that they are holding out in the mountains somewhere or have made good their escape by freight trains towards Baltimore, Philadelphia or some other city where they can wait until the first flush of pursuit is over.

AGAINST BARKDOLL

Want License Refused to Former Gettysburg Hotel Man.

A remonstrance was filed in Franklin County Court on Wednesday against the granting of license to William Barkdoll at the National Hotel, Greencastle, alleging that there was lack of necessity and that Mr. Barkdoll was not a fit man to be granted license. He was formerly proprietor of the Globe Hotel, now the Lincoln Way Hotel, here. The remonstrance against Mr. Barkdoll was the only one filed in Franklin County.

BIGLERVILLE REVIVAL

The Knights of the Golden Eagle will attend the revival service in the United Brethren church at Biglerville this evening and Rev. O. E. Krenz, the evangelist, will have as his subject "Backsliding." Saturday evening the subject of the sermon will be, "The Unpardonable Sin." The meetings are well attended and keen interest is shown.

DIRECTORS HEAR OF BIG TOPICS

Representatives of Adams County Schools are Told that Teachers should be Given Pensions. Preparedness, too.

Adams County school directors in attendance at the session of the State convention at Harrisburg were told of teachers' pensions and national problems at the meetings on Thursday.

Dr. J. George Becht, secretary of the State Board of Education, declared that the subject of teachers' pensions should be given careful consideration because, while teachers were not much subject to accidents, yet their occupation was a dangerous one. He said that figures showed teachers liable to various ailments and that they should be protected in the days when they are unable to continue service.

The association supported the movement to have school bonds made free from State tax, but no recommendations were made by the Legislature Committee because another meeting will be held before the Legislature gets under way.

The chief addresses of the morning session were by Superintendent W. M. Davidson, Pittsburgh, who declared that more attention should be given to industrial education, and by Superintendent O. G. Welfing, Potter county, who said that the rural schools needed more teachers familiar with rural life and not so many who specialized in the classics.

In the evening Congressman S. D. Fess, Ohio, spoke on preparedness, urging that the United States make ready against any possible aggression

FOR ANOTHER FEEDER

Hagerstown Wants a Loop of the Lincoln Highway.

In order to divert the Lincoln Highway feeder from Washington to Gettysburg, in such a way that it will include Hagerstown and Antietam, Colonel Joseph C. Roulette is in Washington trying to secure the interest of influential men.

The Hagerstown Mail says: "The Lincoln Way branches off below Philadelphia and by some Pennsy political influence was taken to Gettysburg over the Lancaster and Gettysburg way and Bedford Pike scheme west. This ably cut out Washington, where Lincoln died and also Harper's Ferry, where the War began, Antietam and South Mountain and all the Potomac border of the contending brothers.

"Frederick is after the branch from Washington passing through there and claims to have won out, the road going then to Emmitsburg and Gettysburg or via Westminster to the other route.

"Hagerstown is entitled to a place along the line and certainly Harper's Ferry and Antietam are. It is trusted that Colonel Roulette will win in his endeavor."

PALATE PUNCTURED

Little Child Painfully, though not Seriously, Hurt.

Lester Lease, the one and one half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Lease, of near East Berlin, while playing in company with a five year old child, sustained a punctured palate, caused by falling on the stick with which he was playing. An East Berlin physician was summoned and rendered surgical assistance. Just one year ago, the same child underwent an operation at the York hospital. It is stated that the condition of the child is not serious.

O. C. Wareheim, of Frederick, Md., was re-elected president, and H. C. Heckert was again chosen secretary of the Pen Mar Association.

HALF MILLION TO BUY BIG ENGINES

Western Maryland Preparing to Get Large Equipment. Extensive Improvements are Planned also. For Loans.

Improvements to the extent of nearly half a million dollars are contemplated by the Western Maryland Railway, according to an application filed Thursday with the Public Service Commission for the right to issue notes to the amount of $450,000 for the purchase of fifteen Mallet engines.

Heavy increases in all kinds of traffic on that portion of the system have resulted in plans being considered by the management of the Western Maryland Railway Company for double-tracking the line between Big Pool and Williamsport, Md. The distance between these two points is about 11 miles, and to lay a second track would necessitate the expenditure of approximately a half million dollars. No decision has as yet been reached in the matter, but it is not unlikely that the double track will be built within the next few months.

The Western Maryland has well under way the building of a stretch of second track between Blue Mountain and Highfield, and it is expected that this work will be completed in the near future.

The gross earnings of the company from July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year, to January 31 totaled $6,241,930.43, a gain of $1,384,885.15, as contrasted with the same period of the previous fiscal year.

At this rate the Western Maryland will close the fiscal year ending June 30 next with the largest gross revenues in the history of the property. It is predicted that the total gross will reach $12,500,000 for the 12 months.

whether under direct or cross examination. Said Mr. Benner, "In a practice of many years I have never seen a witness who has become less confused than this man." He asked the jury to consider the shooting from the necessity of self defense.

The remainder of the morning was consumed by Mr. Keith's closing remarks for the Commonwealth. His address was not concluded until some time after the resumption of court for the afternoon session. Preliminary to his review of the testimony for the benefit of the jury he stated that Mr. Benner had made the most masterful plea he had ever heard in this Court.

Mr. Keith said in part, "God created this earth that men might live. To protect life there must be law and the laws of the country are founded upon the right of life. Laws must be administered in the spirit they are constructed. God says, 'Thou shalt not kill.' The man killed is without protection, and the jury must not be swayed by prejudice, passion or sympathy. If any part of the legal machinery were affected by sympathy, and officers failed to do their duty they would fail in their purpose; they would be a matter of contempt and go over the matter in detail but cautioned the jury to disregard those statements made by Mrs. Sharran while on the stand, because a wife or husband is not qualified to testify against the other. He also referred to several other parts of the testimony that were not perfectly clear.

The charge was completed after five o'clock and the jury immediately took up consideration of the case.

J. Donald Swope Esq. made the first plea for the defendant, and said that his acquittal was not asked on the ground of any unwritten law, but on the law as was contained on the statute books by which he was justified in shooting Deardoff in self defense. Mr. Swope claimed that in not one material matter of fact had the testimony of the Commonwealth differed from that of the defense, and the Commonwealth's only plea was on unsubstantiated theories. He laid special stress on the testimony of Harvey Sharrah. During the course of his address Mr. Swope took occasion to flay unmercifully Mrs Sharrah and her conduct with Deardoff as well as her attitude during the trial.

WAR ON BRANDEIS IS NONPARTISAN

Progressive Wings of Both Parties Support Nomination.

CONSERVATIVES OPPOSE HIM

Democrats Have Larger Proportion of Progressive Members Than the Republicans—"Floppers" Is New but Expressive Term Added to Political Vocabulary.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Feb. 4.—[Special.]—The fight against the confirmation of Louis D. Brandeis as an associate justice of the supreme court demonstrates that the thing called "progressive" is not confined to any one party.

Progressiveness is something that finds itself nonpartisan and is opposed by conservatism in both parties. The lineup for and against Brandeis demonstrates that the idea of progressiveness has not been changed by the rise and fall of the bull moose party, which bore the name Progressive.

Progressiveness means radicalism, a fight against the rich, support of the poor, a fight against corporations, privileged classes (such classes being richer than the vast majority) and a general tendency to have the federal government regulate most of the affairs of the people.

Opposition to the new ideas, opposition to all that is represented in the word progressive is found in conservatism.

Not on Party Lines.

And this division is not on party lines. There was never a time when the political parties lined up solidly on one side or another and were all progressives or conservatives. That is still true. The parties are split on the Brandeis confirmation, the progressive element in both are for Brandeis and the conservative element in both are against him. Not entirely, for there are conservative Democrats who will go with the president.

As to parties it is the same now as always, the larger proportion of radicals or progressives are in the Democratic party.

"Floppers" in Politics.

Congressman Dies of Texas has added a new word to the political vocabulary. Replying to Jim Mann's support of the president for preparedness after being a small army and little navy man all his career, Dies called him the prince of "floppers." He went on at some length and had a great deal of fun with the Republican leader.

A few days later J. Hampton Moore came to the front with a long speech in which he repeated the Texas word and described in detail the "flopper" of President Wilson, not only on preparedness, but on several planks of the Democratic platform.

Way back in the Randall-Clarke divisions of the Democratic party the two wings once joined and routed the opposition. It was celebrated in a doggerel, in which the line occurred, "When the two wings flopped together." Maybe the Wilson and Mann wings are "flopping" together.

Clarke's Definition.

During a discussion of the Philippine bill Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, opposing the Clarke amendment (which contained the whole meat in the economy), said that it was not intended to have the Philippines run wild and commit wrongs with their independence; hence the United States should have a restraining power.

"Independence," declared Clarke of Arkansas, "means absence of outside control. Independence consists in doing wrong if you want to."

Feels Fully Justified.

Many years ago, before he had taken his seat after his first election to the house, Senator Shafroth of Colorado secured the passage of a bill for a mint at Denver. "I feel fully justified," said Shafroth, "for that mint has become very useful. There is now $100,000,000 in gold stored there, which the Japs can't get if they capture the Pacific coast."

"Cumbering Up the Record."

There has always been in the senate some one who fought against "cumbering up the Record" with all sorts of stuff, comments of professors, uplifters, politicians, statesmen, editors and others. For a long time Senator Smoot of Utah has constituted himself the guardian of the Record and to some extent has kept out some of the extraneous matter. But it all gets in after a while. As Senator Gallinger sagely remarked, "The present objection will keep this out of the Record, but only until the senator presenting it or some other senator desires to read it to the senate, then it will go in." So, first to last, any man with a friend in the senate can get anything he wants into the Congressional Record.

"The Real Boobs."

"The real boobs in this congress," remarked one of the cynical members, "are those new fellows who worked so hard to get places on the rivers and harbors committee and public buildings committee with the idea that they would be able to carry off fat slices of pork for their districts. They have been joined by the president, who served notice that there are to be no pork bills this session. 'Poor boobs,' that's what they are. They're up against it."

Not a Soothing Explanation.

"What do you think of his nerve?" exclaimed the old man, who was not notoriously tricky in business. "He called me a barefaced robber." "Oh, well," replied the man who knew him, "probably in his excitement he didn't notice your mustache."

OPERATORS FOR SLIDING SCALE

Mine Owners Are Against Bi-Yearly Contracts.

OPPOSE SHORTER HOURS

Declare Any Increase in Wages Granted Workmen Must be Paid by Consumers of Anthracite.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The anthracite operators after a meeting issued their reply to the demands of the union miners which were ratified by the United Mine Workers of America at their convention held in Indianapolis a few days ago. The statement in part says:

"The anthracite miners ask for a two-year agreement beginning and ending simultaneously with the agreement in the bituminous field—a business arrangement that is shown by actual experience in the bituminous field to threaten a bi-yearly disturbance of the peace and prosperity of the miners, operators and general public."

"The anthracite operators believe that the industrial disturbances incident to bi-yearly contracts can be better adjusted if the automatic method of the sliding scale, a profit-sharing plan established by the commission (appointed in 1902 by ex-President Roosevelt) and abolished at the demand of the miners in 1912, is restored."

"The sliding scale guaranteed the miners a minimum wage, but granted them an increase of one per cent in their wage for each increase of five cents a ton in the price of domestic coal at New York."

"The operators hold that it is their unquestioned right to make any change in the method of mining, or the conduct of their mining operations which will secure additional safety to their employees or greater efficiency in their methods of production, provided that said change does not result in any reduction of wages for their employees below those rates established by the award of the anthracite coal strike commission."

"The miners claim that food costs are forty per cent more than at the time the anthracite coal strike commission made its award. Were this the fact, the reports of the United States bureau of labor show that the cost of food represents forty per cent of the workman's cost of living for himself and his family. This would indicate an increase of only sixteen per cent in his total cost of living as compared with an increase of over thirty-six per cent in his earning capacity."

"To reduce the maximum number of hours which a breaker may work each day, as demanded by the miners, will certainly reduce the capacity of the anthracite mines and will surely increase the danger of a coal shortage at the time of year when an increased production is required by the consumers of coal."

"The operators believe it better to abolish the grievance committee and return absolutely to the method established by the anthracite coal strike commission. The operators believe the rates now paid are fair, but if any adjustment is necessary there is no objection on their part to making such changes as will give the machine miners the opportunity of earning wages that are equitable as compared with those of equivalent occupations."

WILLARD-MORAN MATCHED

Will Fight in New York for a Purse of $67,500.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Jesse Willard, heavyweight champion, signed a contract here to meet Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh, at Madison Square Garden, New York, March 17, in a ten-round match.

The agreement was reached between Dave Lewinsol, representing Tex Rickard, the California promoter, and Tom Jones, Willard's manager.

The terms are that Willard is to receive $47,500 and fifty-one per cent of the moving picture concession. Moran is to get $20,000.

Ship Builders Raise Wages.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building company announced an advance of ten per cent in the hourly wage rates to all of the employees of the yards, shops and foundries of the company. This will include between 4000 and 5000 men and will mean a total advance in the payroll of more than $150,000 annually.

Woman's Body Found in River.

National Park, N. J., Feb. 4.—The body of a well-dressed woman, appearing thirty-five years old, was found here in the Delaware river. She is supposed to be from Philadelphia. Nothing was found on the body by which she could be identified. The body was taken to a morgue in Woodbury and awaits identification.

CANADA'S PARLIAMENT BUILDING BURNED

Several Lives Lost in Fire That Swept Structure.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Canada's parliament buildings were destroyed by an incendiary fire that started in the reading room of the house of commons and spread with remarkable rapidity throughout the buildings.

The bodies of two women have been taken from the ruins and it is feared many others lost their lives, as the fire took place while parliament was in session and several members are reported missing. The monetary loss will be heavy, as the buildings were the finest in the country.

Sir Robert Borden escaped from his room without hat or coat. Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, is badly burned.

Several members were cut by falling glass and burned by flames in escaping.

Mme. Seignie, wife of Speaker Seignie, had to jump through the window of her apartments which are in the commons chamber. Her guests, Mrs. Bray and Mrs. Dussault, of Quebec, were burned to death. Their bodies were recovered.

Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, is authority for the statement that the fire was of incendiary origin.

"There is no doubt but that the fire is the result of chemical explosions carefully planned," he said. "The fire simply spread as if through dynamite."

SCHWAB TO BUILD SHIPS

The purchase price is said to have been considerably more than a million dollars.

SANDY BEND IN PERIL

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

When the constable at Judge Hoke's court had cried "Hear ye!" three times the judge arose and said:

"Men of Sandy Bend, if I speak in a broken voice and my chin quivers when I talk it is because I am feeling such eminent emotions as I have not felt in twenty years before."

"Why this emotion? Why do I stand here with the tears ready to fall at any minute?"

"I will tell you what is the matter, though you know as well as I do. We have been fighting civilization for thirty years, and at last we are licked. Yes, my friends, I hate to say the word, but we are licked."

"What was that which awoke Sandy Bend from its happy sleep at daylight the other mornin'?" What was that noise that jumped us out of our blankets and caused us to look at each other as if we had wakened in another land?"

"Toot! Toot! Toot!"

"Yes, great heavings. It was the toot of a locomotive on the new railroad, only five miles away, which is to run into Sandy Bend next week. Think of it—a railroad into Sandy Bend! That's one of the pluses we have been looked on. It has wanted to come here for the last fifteen years, but our guns have kept it away."

"Yes, my tears fall and my chin quivers as I talk of civilization coming in to this happy community. We have hung horse thieves, about once a week, for years past. About once a week also some man has been shot for holdin' five acres at poker."

"My tears fall afresh as I realize Sandy Bend has been a little paradise on earth. And now it is to be crushed, wrecked, ruined forever as the right kind of a town to live in. Why, the Chinymen will make their skiddoo, and the dogs will run away from it! Since that toot of the locomotive the other mornin' there has been a man here to see about a street car line. A street car line for Sandy Bend to take the place of the cayuse!"

"And along comes a man who says Sandy Bend ought have waterworks. Is it any wonder that three or four men faint away on hearin' of it?"

"And along comes another man and says we are to have gas works."

"Hasn't Sandy Bend got along with tallow candles and kerosene torches all this time, and has anybody kicked about it?"

"Here is a most beautiful and happy spot. There are mountains all around. In the mountains grows the grizzly bear, and the wild Indian hunts for the white man's scalp. The sun ever shines there. There are no spring frosts. The winter don't freeze a man to death. The birds twitter, the jack rabbits play about like lambskins, and there is just shootin' enough to keep the blood in good circulation."

"And all this is to be wrecked and ruined and brung low! What for? That the thing called civilization may move from east to west and gobble up everything in its path."

"And what do we get by the change? We get the plug hat and cane; we get the tan shoes and red neckties; we get the dress coat and the eyeglass; we get the poodle dog and the class of men who are not much better."

"If we remain here amid all these changes we have got to dress different, live different, act different. And how many days do you think the Lord will give us? Why, we'll begin to die off like flies in a hailstorm, and inside of six months the toughest of us will be laid low. Civilization won't even let us be buried with our friends up on the hillside, but the newcomers will start what they call a cemetery and sell the land off at $10 a lot and make a law that anybody who dies has got to be buried there."

"Now, about myself. As a court of justice I haven't given you much law, but I have given you justice as I understood it. If I have made any error it was an error of judgment and not of the heart. There will come along in a few weeks a man to take my place. He will run this court accordin' to law. There will be a dozen lawyers in the room, and no dogs admitted. One lawyer after another will get up and gab; one witness after another will tell the truth or lie about it. It will take that that court a whole day to try a case that you have heard me decide in five minutes."

"The question is being asked on every side, What kin be done? Kin any thing be done? I doubt it very much, but we will hold a public meetin' to-morrow. If we kin raise a hundred men to go out to the new railroad and shoot off the hundred men workin' there maybe we can hold civilization back a year or two longer or altogether. Let every man in Sandy Bend be at the meetin' to-morrow with two guns and a determination to defend our rights or perish in the attempt."

"That is a case here before this court. It is that of Bill Savage agin Ace High, the Chinymen who does our washee. They got into a squabble about an old shirt and drew their guns and fired bullets at each other. Bill may be in the right or Ace High has the right on his side. I ain't goin' into the case as a court, but as an individual. I am goin' to turn them both out doors without their guns and let 'em fight it out. My emotions as a court are too deeply stirred to listen to any testimony, but as an individual I shall be interested in seein' a fight between a Chin and a white man."

"This court now stands adjourned, perhaps forever. Let us all weep."

Seems the Longest.

"Paw, what's the longest period of time?" "From one pay day to the next."

Retailers, especially the small store-keepers, are becoming better acquainted.

They are learning how to count costs, compute profits and stop leaks.

They are discerning the money-making possibilities in smaller stocks and quicker turnovers.

They are learning the power of newspaper advertising and the profit that comes from co-operation with their local newspaper.

They are watching the national advertising in the newspapers and studying how to make it pay them.

They are seeing to it that their windows show the advertised goods at the time the newspaper advertising is running.

GRIP MAKES MAN
COMMIT SUICIDE

Only Reason Assigned for Rash Act of York County Farmer. Shot himself and Cut his Throat with Razor.

Franklin P. Lloyd, 65 years old, a widely known cigar manufacturer and farmer, of York County, committed suicide Thursday afternoon, following an aggravated attack of gripe which continued for three weeks, by shooting himself in the abdomen and slashing himself across the throat, severing the windpipe. Either wound would have been sufficient to produce death.

Lloyd chose as a time to end his life when his wife and son, David, were in the barn at work. He went to the rear of the tobacco shed, back of the barn, and placing a revolver against his body, presumably directed at his heart, discharged it. The aim proved poor, and Lloyd then with a razor, with which he had shaved himself during the afternoon slashed himself across the throat. This effort was not bungled and death took place almost instantly.

Mrs. Lloyd and son, David, had left him in the house when they went to the barn, the former to milk the cows, and the son to feed the stock. These two and a son, Daniel, living across the way from his father's residence ran to the house when they heard the revolver shot. Not finding Lloyd there they began a search and he was discovered by David lying in the snow at the rear of the tobacco shed.

He leaves his wife and six children.

A DIME SHOWER

And it Reached a Total of Fifty Dollars.

The Times told earlier in the week that Rev. J. R. Hutchison, formerly of this place, on Sunday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his entrance into the work of the Christian ministry. A further account tells of the way his friends helped him to observe the day. A surprise came in the way of a dime shower. Dimes came to the clergyman's residence until they made the sum of $50.

Along with them came about 220 letters and post cards, many of them from members of the New Cumberland congregation (who contributed $42 of the $50 in dimes) and some from outside the congregation.

Sunday night, Rev. Mr. Hutchison attended the service in the United Brethren church and was called upon for a brief address. When he told the 500 people that the dime shower amounted to $50, the large congregation burst into applause.

SHORTAGE IN STAMPS

William F. Benchoff, Hagerstown, Post Office Clerk, Missing.

Official confirmation of a shortage in the general stamp account at the Hagerstown post office was made Thursday by Post Office Inspector E. Partridge, of Washington, who, with another inspector, made an investigation. The shortage amounts to $1,120.

William F. Benchoff, stamp clerk, has been missing since January 17. Inspector Partridge stated that the department would like to locate Benchoff, who left on a nine days' leave of absence and has not returned. The missing stamps were in 1 and 2 cent denominations.

AGAINST BARKDOLL

Want License Refused to Former Gettysburg Hotel Man.

A remonstrance was filed in Franklin County Court on Wednesday against the granting of license to William Barkdoll at the National Hotel, Greencastle, alleging that there was lack of necessity and that Mr. Barkdoll was not a fit man to be granted license. He was formerly proprietor of the Globe Hotel, now the Lincoln Way Hotel, here. The remonstrance against Mr. Barkdoll was the only one filed in Franklin County.

NO CLUES HELD TO DYNAMITERS

Bold Yeggmen Make Good their Escape from Mount Holly Springs and their Capture is Regarded as Improbable.

Unless Federal detectives called to the scene have more information than has so far been made public, little additional is known as to the whereabouts of the daring dynamiters who early Wednesday morning blew the safe at the Mt. Holly post office and escaped with money and stamps.

Wednesday afternoon Inspector Crawford, Mechanicsburg, and two men from Philadelphia arrived at Mount Holly and began checking up the damage. Miss Alice Mullin, the postmistress, said that the loss would be less than $300.

The robbers seemed to know what was valuable, she said. They did not bother to go through the mail, and took only cash and regular issue stamps. Postal savings stamps were in the safe but these were laid to one side without being taken.

The long start given the men may militate against their capture. They had five hours start before the first alarm was given and it was nearly twelve hours after the explosion that the Federal men began tracing the damage.

While some persons in Mount Holly are of the belief that the robbers were possibly persons living in or near the town, the officers are said to think it was the work of professionals. The fact that the men came seemingly on an anniversary, that they followed the same tactics as on the former occasion, and that they went about their work in a calm manner without paying the slightest attention to what the residents might do, seems to establish the fact that they were criminals of a high order. They were doubtless well armed and hoped to be able to get away before a party could be organized to stop them. Further, their knowledge of what was and what was not easily convertible into money seems to establish a knowledge of this sort of work.

The suspicion is that they are holding out in the mountains somewhere or have made good their escape by freight trains towards Baltimore, Philadelphia or some other city where they can wait until the first flush of pursuit is over.

Dr. Smyser was born in Gettysburg, and was a son of the late Judge Daniel M. Smyser, a presiding judge of the Adams County Court. OLIVER SHARRAH
IS ACQUITTED

Court House Filled Quickly and Scores are Turned away when Bell Announced at Half Past Nine that Verdict had been Reached. Jury Stayed out Longer than Expected. Sharrah's First Thought on Acquittal is of his Mother.

General Gratification Over the Result as Agreed Upon

Not Guilty was the verdict of the jury announced shortly before 10 o'clock to-night in the trial of Oliver Sharrah for the murder of Peter Deardorff.

One minute later a horde of enthusiastic spectators literally rushed upon the freed man to congratulate him. His wife and family were not in the audience.

Sharrah said he was grateful for the verdict and hurried from the room as soon as the crowd made way, saying, "I must go, my mother is waiting to see me." His aged mother was a regular attendant at the trial.

Sharrah expects to remain in Gettysburg for some time visiting his brother-in-law, Joseph Galbraith.

Counsel for the defendant, Messrs. Swope and Benner expressed their thanks to the jury and said they felt confident of the result.

It was 9.51 o'clock when Judge McPherson took his seat on the bench. He was preceded by Judges Dicks and Miller. The jury were ushered in promptly.

In answer to the question: "Have you agreed upon a verdict?" the foreman answered, "Not Guilty."

The Court said, "After a long and tedious trial we want to discharge you with the thanks of the Court and you are now discharged."

To the prisoner he said, "The jury having rendered a verdict of not guilty, you are now discharged."

The court house bell announcing to the people that a verdict was reached began ringing at 9.30 and inside of four minutes the building was crowded to the doors. The tipstaves turned a mass of people away from the court room. Among the audience were a number of women who were not seen at the trial.

Deputy Sheriff Hartman appeared with the prisoner in his charge soon after the sound of the bell had ceased and most of the members of the bar were on hand before Judge McPherson arrived.

The verdict was reached at eighteen minutes after nine but a few minutes elapsed before the necessary notification could be made to the officials. People returning from the basket ball game at College (which by the way resulted in a victory for Gettysburg by a score of 31 to 25) rushed into the Court House and received a climax to their evening's entertainment.

When Judge McPherson had concluded his remarks to the jury they were escorted to the small room in the North West corner of the court house and remained there until they finished their deliberation. Their evening meal was served to them in this room. Considerable interest has been manifested in the amount of remuneration they receive, the report having gotten abroad that they were paid more than the juries on trials of lesser consequence. This is not correct. They receive the regular amount of $2.50 per day, the same as is paid all jurymen. But, by reason of their being in charge of the Commonwealth they are furnished bed and board together with cigars and an extra lunch during the evening if they desire it. This would cost approximately another $2.50 each day and it is probable that the report of extra pay emanated in this manner.

They have been quartered at the City Hotel where they occupied the whole of the fourth floor. No other persons, except the constables in charge, were allowed on the same floor. Neither were the jurymen permitted to speak with anyone or read newspapers during the course of the trial. They were supposed to receive no intimation of the public sentiment whatever, but to form their opinion entirely from the evidence produced at the trial. The personnel of the body was as follows:

Samuel Miller, a barber employed in the shop of H. B. Sef-ton, at Gettysburg; John F. Gable, a farmer of Huntingdon township; E. C. Fitz, a farmer of Liberty township; William E. Flemming, a farmer of Straban township; Frank Patterson, a cabinet maker employed at the Reaser Furniture factory in Gettysburg; John Stevens, a farmer of Cumberland township; John Ditzler, a farmer of Union township; W. W. Reaser, a farmer of East Berlin; and Winfield Horner, a poultryman, of Cumberland township; Jacob Bentzel, a farmer of Liberty township; Bernard Bowers, a farmer of Mt. Joy township; Edgar P. Hamilton, salesman, Gettysburg.

The time occupied in reaching a verdict was longer than most people expected but it evidences that the case was carefully considered. At the ringing of the court house bell the streets in that vicinity swarmed with a crowd anxious to get the result of the case that has created more interest than any since the famous Eyer trial.

The plea made before the jury this morning in behalf of Oliver Sharrah by his counsel, Mr. Benner, was one of the most eloquent addresses delivered in the Adams County Court. It showed the rare presence of the finished speaker and a continuity of story that was remarkable when it is considered that there was no reference to notes.

Mr. Benner spoke for nearly two hours and reviewed vividly the various scenes, described by witnesses, that led up to the murder. His plea was that of self defense. The element of sympathy, while mentioned, was not emphasized, but the matter of justification was described with detail and force.

In his preliminary remarks he referred to the length of time the case had taken and said it had been most carefully conducted. He expressed regret in being compelled to paint the victim "in colors in which he showed himself during life, especially when he has since been before a Judge, who requires no accuser." He declared that among the array of counsel for the Commonwealth was employed every district attorney who had held that office within the past twenty five years; men who were trained in the prosecution, and who had back of them all the resources of the state.

The case, he stated, depended upon three principal characters, described by the prosecution as "laughing Pete Deardorff, the roistering, honest free spending, general good fellow; Sharrah, a man of weak morals and lacking in the principals of manhood; and the woman—Mrs. Sharrah." As the defense showed Deardorff, said Mr. Benner, he was a man with lust in his heart and liquor in his brain, a robust bully with a profound contempt of the man whose wife he betrayed. Sharrah was comparatively a weakling, a man without strong purpose and afraid of his life at the hands of Deardorff. Mrs. Sharrah acceded to Deardorff's overtures with consent, if not with pleasure.

In submitting their side to the jury, it was said, they were called upon to pass upon two main questions, namely: the mental and physical attitude of Deardorff at the actual time of the shooting, with reference to his intentions, his gestures and posture, together with the imminence of attack; Sharrah's mental attitude when he knew he was in danger of assault, and his contemplation of Deardorff having a weapon in his possession.

The preceding events involved were then taken up in detail to allow the jury to determine the state of affairs at the Sharrah house on that fatal night. No incident favorable to the side of the defendant in the long examination of witnesses was overlooked and they were played upon with a full realization of their effectiveness.

The realistic picturization of Deardorff's mental attitude upon the night of the murder, "with a heart filled with lust and a mind befogged with liquor that induced an effort to seduce the wife before the eyes of the husband," for the first time since the start of the proceedings brought tears to the eyes of the man on trial for his life. His aged mother, sitting in the audience, hid her face behind her hands while the wife maintained her composure and apparent disregard that she has affected from the beginning.

The address was brought to a close by the allusion to Sharrah's attitude upon the stand and the degree of consistency that he showed at all times whether under direct or cross examination. Said Mr. Benner, "In a practice of many years I have never seen a witness who has become less confused than this man." He asked the jury to consider the shooting from the necessity of self defense.

The remainder of the morning was consumed by Mr. Keith's closing remarks for the Commonwealth. His address was not concluded until some time after the resumption of court for the afternoon session. Preliminary to his review of the testimony for the benefit of the jury he stated that Mr. Benner had made the most masterful plea he had ever heard in this Court.

Mr. Keith said in part, "God created this earth that men might live. To protect life there must be law and the laws of the country are founded upon the right of life. Laws must be administered in the spirit they are constructed. God says, 'Thou shalt not kill.' The man killed is without protection, and the jury must not be swayed by prejudice, passion or sympathy. If any part of the legal machinery were affected by sympathy and officers failed to do their duty they would fail in their purpose; they would be a matter of contempt and without responsibility. When guilty men escape there is an incentive for other men to commit like crimes.

"The Commonwealth is not here to persecute Sharrah. It is not a pleasant duty but the law requires justice and the abjuration of personal preference. Since life is the chief object of law, nature's greatest crime is the taking of life, but a public officer's failure to do his duty by sympathy or without due regard for the consequence of his act tears society by its basic roots and strikes a blow at the heart of civilization. There is such a thing as justifiable killing but in this case the hand of the Commonwealth has been forced. It is an ugly, dirty affair all through—a drunken brawl, but Deardorff's dying statement should be sufficient to convict the prisoner."

Mr. Keith then took up the evidence given through the course of the proceedings and pointed out the facts with conclusions to show that Sharrah premeditated the shooting. He concluded by asking the jury to return a verdict of murder. His talk was carefully connected and possibly more comprehensive than the other addresses.

Judge McPherson's Charge

Judge McPherson in delivering his charge to the jury commended them for their careful attention at the trial and cautioned that this care be continued in determining the verdict. He said they must be mindful of their duty to society and see that it is protected. They must not be frightened from their duty by fear of consequences of their decision for this consequence does not devolve upon them. Fear, pity, indignation, and passion should not enter into their consideration. The burden of proof for the crime is on the Commonwealth.

Murder in its different degrees was defined and the provisions of the law were stated for each case. In this case the shooting is not denied and a verdict of first or second degree murder, of manslaughter or of not guilty may be found.

One theory as presented by the Commonwealth is that Deardorff was at Sharrah's by invitation and Sharrah was jealous of the man. This jealousy, aggravated by liquor and without provocation or justification, induced willful and premeditated murder. Another theory is that Sharrah was so under the influence of liquor that the affair assumed the proportions of a drunken brawl. By reason of this drunkenness the defendant was not in control of his mind and in this event the crime would be second degree murder.

If Deardorff was at Sharrah's house against the owner's will and was disturbing the peace and sully the honor of his wife, was threatening bodily harm while the prisoner was helpless to prevent it by reason of Deardorff's superior strength, then Sharrah was justified in resorting to his gun, believing Deardorff would leave according to his orders, under these circumstances; and if Deardorff still refused and assumed a threatening attitude so as to cause the defendant fear of his life, then the killing is justifiable to avert the peril. The fact that Sharrah was in his own home relieved him of the duty to retreat.

It is the duty of the jury to determine which of these different presentations of the case is correct. They were further cautioned that reasonable apprehension based on appearances at the time of the shooting was all that was necessary even though it were afterwards ascertained there was no true cause for this apprehension.

In reviewing the testimony, the Court said it was not the intention to go over the matter in detail but cautioned the jury to disregard those statements made by Mrs. Sharrah while on the stand, because a wife or husband is not qualified to testify against the other. He also referred to several other parts of the testimony that were not perfectly clear.

The charge was completed after 7 o'clock and the jury immediately took up consideration of the case.

DIRECTORS HEAR OF BIG TOPICS

Representatives of Adams County Schools are Told that Teachers should be Given Pensions. Preparedness, too.

Adams County school directors in attendance at the session of the State convention at Harrisburg were told of teachers' pensions and national problems at the meetings on Thursday.

Dr. J. George Becht, secretary of the State Board of Education, declared that the subject of teachers' pensions should be given careful consideration because, while teachers were not much subject to accidents, yet their occupation was a dangerous one. He said that figures showed teachers liable to various ailments and that they should be protected in the days when they are unable to continue service.

The association supported the movement to have school bonds made free from State tax, but no recommendations were made by the Legislature Committee because another meeting will be held before the Legislature gets under way.

The chief addresses of the morning session were by Superintendent W. M. Davidson, Pittsburgh, who declared that more attention should be given to industrial education, and by Superintendent O. G. Welfing, Potter county, who said that the rural schools needed more teachers familiar with rural life and not so many who specialized in the classics.

In the evening Congressman S. D. Fess, Ohio, spoke on preparedness, urging that the United States make ready against any possible aggression.

FOR ANOTHER FEEDER

Hagerstown Wants a Loop of the Lincoln Highway.

In order to divert the Lincoln Highway feeder from Washington to Gettysburg, in such a way that it will include Hagerstown and Antietam, Colonel Joseph C. Roulette is in Washington trying to secure the interest of influential men.

The Hagerstown Mail says: "The Lincoln Way branches off below Philadelphia and by some Pennsylvania political influence was taken to Gettysburg over the Lancaster and Gettysburg way and Bedford Pike scheme was. This ably cut out Washington, where Lincoln died and also Harper's Ferry, where the War began, Antietam and South Mountain and all the Potomac border of the contending brothers.

"Frederick is after the branch from Washington passing through there and claims to have won out, the road going then to Emmitsburg and Gettysburg or via Westminster to the other route.

"Hagerstown is entitled to a place along the line and certainly Harper's Ferry and Antietam are. It is trusted that Colonel Roulette will win in his endeavor."

PALATE PUNCTURED

Little Child Painfully, though not Seriously, Hurt.

Lester Lease, the one and one half year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Lease, of near East Berlin, while playing in company with a five year old child, sustained a punctured palate, caused by falling on the stick with which he was playing. An East Berlin physician was summoned and rendered surgical assistance. Just one year ago, the same child underwent an operation at the York hospital. It is stated that the condition of the child is not serious.

WILSON BACK FROM WEST

Is Convinced Public Indorse Defense Plans.

WANTS POWERFUL NAVY

Invincible Sea Power Keynote of President's Last Speech—Plans a Second Tour.

Washington, Feb. 4.—President Wilson returned to Washington this afternoon convinced the people of the middle west are with him on the issue of national defense and are prepared to insist congress take speedy action. He finished his speaking tour in St. Louis.

President Wilson's advisers believe he has explained clearly why he considers immediate preparedness imperative, has won many converts to the movement and has given new impetus to a discussion of the cause. From the sympathetic attitude of most of his audiences, from the enthusiasm his every appearance in public has evoked, from the huge crowds which have greeted him, they have drawn the conclusion the people overwhelmingly support his plans—at least in the middle west.

The president's official family want him to start soon on another tour. Senators and representatives from most of the southern states already have asked him to include their sections on his next tour. To this have been added invitations from many public bodies. There is a feeling among some of his most intimate advisers that in choosing the scene for his next plea to the people the president could pay no greater compliment to his own political party than by going into its stronghold.

Minneapolis, St. Paul and Denver have presented what they consider strong claims and a trip to these cities is receiving careful consideration.

It is possible that if the president makes another preparedness tour it may be a combination of the two—a swing to the northwest, including Minneapolis or St. Paul, or both, Denver, and then south into Texas, possibly returning by way of New Orleans, Birmingham or Louisville, although nothing has been decided concerning this.

At least 100,000 persons heard the president's chief speeches. At least 50,000 more crowded about the rear platform of his car during his five-minute talks, though the great majority of these were out of the range of his voice. Hardly fewer than half a million others have been banked on the sidewalks to watch him pass through the cities from railway station to hotel, from auditorium back to his private car.

Reviewing his trip in its high lights the president told his audience in St. Louis that he came away from Washington thinking that the country was with him on the issue of preparedness and is going back knowing that it is with him beyond his greatest hopes. Apparently the president's conviction of this grew with each succeeding day; deepened in Kansas City, when he asked "Would you volunteer?" and received a thundering "Yes," from every section of the great convention hall; and reached its climax with the demonstration at St. Louis when he told an audience, which cheered him tumultuously, that the United States ought to have "incomparably the greatest navy in the world."

All the speeches on preparedness made by the president on his middle west trip will be pointed as a public document. The house voted this be done.

London, Feb. 4.—The London newspapers express the conviction that the Germans are planning a new offensive on a large scale against the left wing of the allies.

Expect Attack at Yser.
Paris, Feb. 4.—Violent German attacks are imminent along the Yser front, according to reports received at the war office.

Large bodies of German troops are being brought up. They are extending and strengthening their elaborate system of trench fortifications along the entire front from Westende to Ypres.

It is believed that the capture of Nieuport is the objective of the offensive movement, but British troops are also preparing to resist an attack in the direction of Dunkirk.

Commenting upon the German preparations the Echo de Paris says: "If Germany is pushed to a last hope, offensive, she will try to execute a coup in Flanders sector, using overwhelming masses of troops and immense quantities of ammunition."

Declares Steward on Boat Used Strong-Arm Methods.
Baltimore, Md., Feb. 4.—The kisses she received from John S. Bradley, of Philadelphia, formerly steward on a bay steamer, and the injuries she sustained while breaking away from the embrace are worth $500.

A jury in the court of common pleas returned a verdict for that amount to Miss Katharine Kenny in her suit against the steamboat company and Bradley.

Miss Kenny asserted that Bradley attacked her while she was a passenger on the steamer Talbot and, despite her struggles against his strong arm methods of love-making, he managed to hug and kiss her. She alleged that in her struggles she fell and was hurt. Bradley denied the charges.

APPAM IS PRIZE, LANSING STATES

There is No Question of Status of Captured British Liner.

ALL BUT PRIZE CREW FREED

Lieutenant Berg and His German Sailors Only Are to be Kept on the Ship.

Washington, Feb. 4.—Secretary of State Lansing stated that there was no question as to the status as a prize of the British steamship Appam, brought into Hampton Roads, Tuesday, by a German prize crew.

He said the question of her disposition still involved further consideration of The Hague convention and the Prussian-American treaty.

Secretary Lansing explained that the fact that there was an American citizen on board (G. A. Tagliaferri), made no material difference. He was well treated while a prisoner, and all of his rights were preserved.

Formal announcement that the Appam is held to be a German prize is expected soon.

With every indication that the vessel will be held by the United States to be a prize of war and not an auxiliary cruiser, the real point to be determined was whether the Appam shall remain in the possession of the prize crew under the terms of the Prussian-American treaty or be returned to her British owners under The Hague convention. Prospects were that the United States would hold that the prize belongs to Germany.

The British ambassador asked that the ship be returned to her British owners under article 21 of The Hague convention. State department officials are doubtful that the article can be applied to the case of the Appam because the Prussian-American treaty is believed to be binding and because Great Britain signed but never ratified The Hague convention.

When the status of the liner is actually decided she will be released from the custody of the Norfolk customs authorities and if turned over to Germany may be interned or sent to sea as the Berlin government chooses.

All Except Prize Crew Released.
Newport News, Va., Feb. 4.—Every one aboard the Appam except the German prize officer, Lieutenant Berg, and members of the prize crew will be permitted to land whenever they desire, it was decided.

Included in those to be released are the twelve British subjects whom the German commander sought to hold as military prisoners because they had been gunpointers on British merchantmen taken by the raider.

The collector of the port, Norman Hamilton, submitted a memorandum to Lieutenant Hans Berg, requesting the release along the lines indicated and the lieutenant said that he would comply with it.

The ruling means the release of over 200 persons, whom Lieutenant Berg planned to hold on the Appam, including Captain Harrison and the entire crew of 155 of the Appam, twelve of her passengers, who belong to the British army or navy, according to the prize commander's contentions, and twenty Germans who were found on the Appam at the time of her capture.

MAY GIVE BONUS

Higher Wages for Non-Union Miners Upheld by Conciliation Board.

Hazleton, Pa., Feb. 4.—A new decision in anthracite mining laws was handed down by Charles P. Neill, of Washington, umpire of the conciliation board, who rules that a coal company possesses the right to pay a bonus to men for personal reasons, such as working during a strike, and that it is not forced to give this same scale to those who walked out.

The decision is based upon the request of the holating engineers of the Gilberton colliery, of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron company, that the umpire direct the operators to pay $90.00 per month instead of $83.60, the union rate they now are receiving.

Certain engineers were given the higher pay and their successors asserted that this scale should not be dropped back to $83.60. Mr. Neill finds that some of the men were paid more because they remained at their places in the 1902 strike. This extra money, he says, is a bonus and the company is meeting its obligations fully to other employees in compensating them according to the scale fixed by the agreement between the United Mine Workers and the operators.

THE NAVY'S SECRET CODE BOOK MISSING

Two Officers May be Court-Martialed.

San Francisco, Feb. 4.—A copy of the battle signal book used by the United States navy has been lost from the torpedo boat destroyer Hull, and the Navy department has ordered the court-martial at Mare Island of Lieutenant Herbert A. Jones, commander of the reserve torpedo flotilla, and of the Hull, and of Ensign Robert Kirkpatrick, executive officer, in whose joint possession the book was.

If the book cannot be found, or its destruction, unread by outsiders, absolutely demonstrated, it may be necessary to provide a new system of secret communication for the navy.

Navy Officials Alarmed

Washington, Feb. 4.—Navy officials admit they are alarmed at the disappearance of the battle signal book from the destroyer Hull.

Admiral Winslow reported that all efforts to find the highly confidential code have been unavailing, and navy officials said it probably would be replaced by another to make useless that which has disappeared, and which they admit they fear may fall into the hands of a foreign government.

BRANDEIS REGARDED AS RADICAL, OUTSPOKEN AND A HARD FIGHTER

First Jew to Be Nominated For Place on United States Supreme Bench in 127 Years' History.

Known as the "Trust Buster" and "People's Lawyer" He Has Made Both Friends and Enemies.

LOUIS DEMBITZ BRANDEIS is regarded as one of the most radical and outspoken lawyers in the country. Therefore when President Wilson sent his name to the senate for confirmation to fill the vacancy on the United States supreme bench caused by the death of Justice Lamar the entire nation was surprised.

Mr. Brandeis, who is the first Jew to be nominated for the office of supreme court justice in the 127 years' history of the court, had not even figured in the calculations of the politicians of either party. As near as can be learned his name was not among the twenty-seven proposed by the leaders of the Democratic party for the position.

There is reason to believe, however, that the president, who has always entertained a high regard for the Boston lawyer upon whom he finally settled, has had him in mind ever since the death of Justice Lamar of Georgia made a vacancy on the bench.

The senators and party leaders of eight states had proposed names for the place to the president, among them former President Taft, Frederick W. Lehmann and some of the most distinguished jurists of Texas, Georgia, North Carolina, Kentucky, Missouri, West Virginia, South Carolina and Arkansas.

Following the receipt of the nomination of Mr. Brandeis in the senate the leaders of the president's party recalled that Mr. Brandeis figured extensively in the president's cabinet plans following his election in 1912. As a matter of fact, it was the conviction of several men who aspired to cabinet honors at that time that the Massachusetts lawyer, variously described as the "trust buster" and the "people's lawyer," would be appointed to the portfolio of justice.

He Was Wilson's Adviser.

The president is reported to have conferred with Mr. Brandeis frequently while he was governor of New Jersey regarding the construction of the "seven sisters" anti-trust bill that he afterward caused to be passed by the legislature of that state and also with reference to several features of his inaugural address.

When the fire of opposition trained on Mr. Brandeis prevented his appointment to Mr. Wilson's cabinet he by no means lost prestige in the estimate of the president. It was at the instance of the president that the Massachusetts lawyer was selected to represent the government in the application of the railways of the country for permission to increase their rates, which resulted in a concession approximating 5 per cent of their average business.

The methods pursued by Mr. Brandeis in opposing the requests of the railroads to increase their rates provoked a storm of criticism against him but that such methods were most thorough and conclusive, however, was admitted generally by railway officials themselves and members of congress.

The fact that the railways were not given permission to adopt an even higher rate of tariff than that granted was credited to the success of Mr. Brandeis in showing that, with efficient management, the railway systems of the country could be conducted on a more economical basis and earn a larger percentage of profits.

The results did not make friends for the man whom the president nominated for the supreme court bench.

Some of His Views.

Some of his public utterances have been:

"The great trouble with all forms of business today is that, too little attention is given to the men at the bottom of the ladder."

"The best brains should teach the men lowest down."

"All the powers of capital and all the ability and intelligence of the men who wield and serve capital have been used to make slaves of these steel workers."

"Capital in many instances really earns a great deal less than is safe for industry."

"There is little choice between unions and employers when it comes to violence."

"There must be not only a division of profits, but of responsibility."

"The worker must have a voice in saying how the business shall be run."

"Crush the trusts and the high cost of living will decrease."

"The liberty of the workman is a hoax."

"Competition in business corresponds to liberty in political and civil life."

"To preserve the liberty of the many we find it necessary to restrict the liberty of the few."

"Price cutting merely is one of the many methods of unfair competition."

"Excesses of competition lead to monopoly just as excesses of liberty lead to anarchy."

"Bobby, do you know you've deliberately broken the eighth commandment by stealing James' candy?"

"Well, I thought I might as well break the eighth commandment and have the candy, as to break the tenth and only 'cover' it."—Life.

Louis Dembitz Brandeis is known as the "people's lawyer" because of his labors in behalf of the public good. Much of his arduous work has been for the public, whom he served with out fee. His one hobby is humanity. Whenever he feels he can lend his aid to the solution of a sociological or economic problem affecting the common people he does so—gratis.

He is a member of the law firm of Brandeis, Dunbar & Nottier of 161 Devonshire street, Boston, and commands large fees as counsel for and against trusts and corporations. But money means little to Mr. Brandeis. It is said of him that on the first day of the year he and his wife figure out their budget for the next twelve months, including a sum to care for them in their old age. This budget may be $15,000, $20,000 or $30,000, but the amount is fixed. Mr. Brandeis then works until he has this amount assured and after that will accept no more retainers, preferring to devote his remaining time to study or to helping humanity.

Was Born In Louisville.

Mr. Brandeis is a southerner, having been born in Louisville, Ky., Nov. 13, 1856, but with his parents moved to New England at an early age. He is a typical New England lawyer—green bag and all—and has even lost his southern accent.

Personally he is a medium sized, wiry man, with piercing gray eyes and a mass of black hair which years have streaked with gray. His hair is always more or less tousled. He gives little attention to tailors. He wears queer looking glasses, sometimes high on his puffed forehead. He is a good story teller and has a most infectious laugh. He talks with emphasis and to the point, with a trick of gesturing when he is engrossed in developing an idea.

His life has been a fight for principle. Some twenty years ago he became convinced the gas and insurance companies were charging too much. He began a battle to reduce the prices of both and after a hard struggle won. The fees he received he turned over to charities. For years he fought and won victories in the courts against corrupt front-hill grabbers in Boston.

Some of His Victories.

Early in 1907 he learned the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, in defiance of law, was endeavoring to secure control of the Boston and Maine, and for two years he prevented the consummation of the New England transportation monopoly. Later he was instrumental in bringing about the reformation of the New York New Haven and Hartford.

In that same year he argued the appeal of the women of Oregon in the supreme court of the United States fixing the hours of labor. On Feb. 28, 1907, the supreme court paid him the almost unparalleled tribute of compelling him by name in its opinion and of quoting extensively from his unique brief. The same thing happened when he won a similar victory for the women of Illinois, fixing ten hours as a day's work.

In the Ballinger-Pinchot controversy, Brandeis espoused the cause of Louis B. Glavis against Secretary of the Interior Ballinger. Ballinger had been whitewashed by the administration but when the matter came before a congressional committee Glavis won. During the summer of 1909 Brandeis almost unaided, settled the disastrous garment workers' strike in New York.

After investigating the railroad situation and appearing as the advocate of the ship-raisers against the railroads, Mr. Brandeis made the statement that the railroads of the country could save $1,000,000 a day if proper economies were practiced and the roads put upon an efficiency basis. He undertook to demonstrate this without salary.

He espoused the cause of President Wilson and was mentioned prominently as a cabinet possibility. His appointment was bitterly opposed by the Massachusetts bar as a southerner and a Massachusetts politician. While never an office seeker, Mr. Brandeis finally became counsel to the interstate commerce commission.

He received his early education in the Louisville schools and studied law at Harvard. He was admitted to the Boston bar in 1878, and was married to Alice Goldhamer of New York in 1881. He is a member of a number of Boston clubs, including the Union City and Exchange, the Harvard club, the Phi Beta Kappa society of Harvard, and is the author of a number of books, monographs, etc., on life insurance, public utilities, money, banking and finance. He is a frequent contributor to legal publications.

About two years ago he became interested in the Zionist movement, which has taken his place in its ranks. He has become one of the most ardent workers in the cause and one of its successes is due to his efforts. He is an ardent supporter of women suffrage, although he formerly opposed it.

On the continent of Africa alone the New Testament, or parts of it, have been translated into 148 languages and dialects. The two latest additions are Dabida—a language of British East Africa—and Limba—the language of a tribe in the hinterland of Sierra Leone.

REVIVE OLD PLAN TO TRAIN TROOPS

Civil War Veteran Proposes Academy In Each State.

SCHEME TRIED IN SIXTIES.

College Opened at Dayton, O., and Was Operated Successfully Until Closed by Lack of Funds—Each School Would Get Government Aid Under the Plan.

Establishment of a military academy in each state of the Union, at which students should be under strict discipline and military instruction—a plan which was put into partial operation soon after the close of the civil war, but which was abandoned after a few years—is suggested by Captain Joseph M. Locke, U. S. A., retired, of Washington. Captain Locke, who was breveted major and lieutenant colonel in the civil war, was active in the establishment of such an academy at Dayton, O., being aided in the work by General J. D. Cox, afterward governor of Ohio, and by Rufus B. Hayes, also a governor of the state and afterward president of the United States. Owing to failure of funds the academy was forced to close in its third year.

The plan as detailed by Captain Locke provided that students at each state military academy should be chosen by competitive examination from among the high school students of the state with the highest scholastic standing. Each school district was to have at least one cadet in the academy.

Control of the Academy.

The academy was to be under the direction of a board of visitors, of which the governor of the state, ex officio, should be president, the remaining members being appointed from the several districts of the state. The superintendent of each academy was to be a man of military experience, and the commandant of cadets was also to be a practical military man, both to be either resigned, retired or active officers of the United States army.

The curriculum of the academies, the plan provided, was to be military and based on that of West Point, and the rules and regulations established at the academies were to be identical, as far as possible, with those in force at the United States Military academy.

The plan provided that students on graduation were to receive from the governor of the state commissions as second lieutenants in the state militia, promotions being made annually as required by incoming cadet graduates until each graduate should have served at least one year as captain. After this they were to be transferred to a list subject to call into service when necessary. From such a list the plan provided that the governor of the state was to select regimental, staff and general officers of the militia of the state. The plan also provided for automatic retirement on attainment of a specified age.

Federal Government Aid.

A definite proportion of infantry, artillery and cavalry equipment for each of the proposed state academies was to be provided by the federal government, which was also to detail military inspectors to insure complete military concordance between the various academies and the regular military establishment of the United States.

The plan was put in operation at Dayton, the citizens of that place having offered best inducements for the location of the Ohio academy. Library, scientific cabinets and physical laboratory equipment for the academy were furnished by Captain Locke from those of Professor John Locke. Regulations were prepared at the West Point academy under the supervision of Captain E. C. Boynton, adjutant, and others and were approved by Governor J. D. Cox of Ohio. Captain C. B. Stevers, U. S. A., was commandant of cadets.

Rapid increase in the number of cadets enrolled required further advances from the private funds of Captain Locke. The growth of the corps continued to a point where the Dayton guarantors conceived the idea that they would not be required to fulfill their promises. Cramped conditions followed the rapid growth of the cadet corps at the academy until at the close of the third academic year, June 30, 1888, the academy was compelled to close. When this occurred the Dayton guarantors came forward to redeem their pledges, but Captain Locke declined to make an effort to rehabilitate the academy and reopen it for another academic year.

Workings of the Plan.

Discussing the plan and its actual operation at the Dayton academy for three years, Captain Locke said: "The three years' working under the system clearly demonstrated that the enforcement of strict details in military requirements and drill in no way was repugnant to cadets, but, as expected, created a satisfactory physical development and laudable pride in military affairs, subordination, organization and systematic procedure in all matters of detail."

"Since the days in which the scheme was devised the great changes in army equipments and practices, I realize, require enlarged training of officers. This has in no way diminished the value of the proposed scheme, but has enhanced the same."

WAR ON BRANDEIS IS NONPARTISAN

CONSERVATIVES OPPOSE HIM

Democrats Have Larger Proportion of Progressive Members Than the Republicans. "Floppers" Is New but Expressive Term Added to Political Vocabularies.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, Feb. 4.—[Special.]—The fight against the confirmation of Louis D. Brandeis as an associate justice of the supreme court demonstrates that the thing called "progressive" is not confined to any one party.

Progressiveness is something that finds itself nonpartisan and is opposed by conservatism in both parties. The lineup for and against Brandeis demonstrates that the idea of progressiveness has not been changed by the rise and fall of the bull moose party, which bore the name Progressive.

Progressiveness means radicalism, a fight against the rich, support of the poor, a fight against corporations, privileged classes (such classes being richer than the vast majority) and a general tendency to have the federal government regulate most of the affairs of the people.

Not on Party Lines.

And this division is not on party lines. There was never a time when the political parties lined up solidly on one side or another and were all progressives or conservatives. That is still true. The parties are split on the Brandeis confirmation, the progressive element in both are for Brandeis and the conservative element in both are arrayed against him. Not entirely, for there are conservative Democrats who will go with the president.

As to parties it is the same now as always, the larger proportion of radicals or progressives are in the Democratic party.

"Floppers" in Politics.

Congressman Dies of Texas has added a new word to the political vocabulary. Replying to Jim Mann's vociferous of the president for preparedness after being a small army and little navy man all his career, Dies called him the prince of "floppers." He went on at some length and had a great deal of fun with the Republican leader.

A few days later J. Hampton Moore came to the front with a long speech, in which he repeated the Texan's word and described in detail the "flops" of President Wilson, not only on preparedness, but on several planks of the Democratic platform.

Way back in the Randall-Clarke divisions of the Democratic party the two wings once joined and routed the opposition. It was celebrated in a doggerel, in which the line occurred: "When the two wings flopped together." Maybe the Wilson and Mann wings are "flopping" together.

Clarke's Definition.

During a discussion of the Philippine bill Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, opposing the Clarke amendment (which contained the whole meat in the cocoanut), said that it was not intended to have the Filipinos run wild and commit wrongs with their independence; hence the United States should have a restraining power.

Feels Fully Justified.

Many years ago, before he had taken his seat after his first election to the house, Senator Shafroth of Colorado secured the passage of a bill for a mint at Denver. "I feel fully justified," said Shafroth, "for that mint has become very useful. There is now $200,000,000 in gold stored there, which the Japs can't get if they capture the Pacific coast."

"Cumbering Up the Record."

There has always been in the senate some one who fought against "cumbering up the Record" with all sorts of stuff, comments of professors, uplifters, politicians, statesmen, editors and others. For a long time Senator Smoot of Utah has constituted himself the guardian of the Record and to some extent has kept out some of the extraneous matter. But it all gets in after awhile. As Senator Gallinger sagely remarked, "The present objection will keep this out of the Record, but only until the senator presenting it or some other senator desires to read it to the senate; then it will go in." So, first to last, any man with a friend in the senate can get anything he wants into the Congressional Record.

"The Real Boobs."

"The real boobs in this congress," remarked one of the cynical members, "are those new fellows who worked so hard to get places on the rivers and harbors committee and public buildings committee with the idea that they would be able to carry off fat slices of pork for their districts. They have been jolted by the president, who served notice that there are to be no pork bills this session. 'Poor boobs' that's what they are. They're up against it!"

Not a Soothing Explanation.

"What do you think of his nerve?" exclaimed the old man, who was notoriously tricky in business. "He called me a barefaced robber." "Oh, well," replied the man who knew him, "probably in his excitement he didn't notice

OPERATORS FOR SLIDING SCALE

Mine Owners Are Against Bi-Yearly Contracts.

Declares Any Increase in Wages Granted Workmen Must Be Paid by Consumers of Anthracite.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The anthracite operators after a meeting issued their reply to the demands of the union miners which were ratified by the United Mine Workers of America at their convention held in Indianapolis a few days ago. The statement in part says:

"The anthracite miners ask for a two-year agreement beginning and ending simultaneously with the agreements in the bituminous field—a business arrangement that is shown by actual experience in the bituminous field to threaten a bi-yearly disturbance of the peace and prosperity of the miners, operators and general public."

"The anthracite operators believe that the industrial disturbances incident to bi-yearly contracts can be better adjusted if the automatic method of the sliding scale, a profit-sharing plan established by the commission (appointed in 1902 by ex-President Roosevelt) and abolished at the demand of the miners in 1912, is restored."

"The sliding scale guaranteed the miners a minimum wage, but granted them an increase of one per cent in their wage for each increase of five cents a ton in the price of domestic coal at New York."

"The operators hold that it is their unquestioned right to make any change in the method of mining, or the conduct of their mining operations which will secure additional safety to their employees or greater efficiency in their methods of production, provided that said change does not result in any reduction of wages to their employees below those rates established by the award of the anthracite coal strike commission."

"The miners claim that food costs are forty per cent more than at the time the anthracite coal strike commission made its award. Were this the fact, the reports of the United States bureau of labor show that the cost of food represents forty per cent of the workman's cost of living for himself and his family. This would indicate an increase of only sixteen per cent in his total cost of living as compared with an increase of over thirty-six per cent in his earnings capacity."

"To reduce the maximum number of hours which a breaker may work each day, as demanded by the miners, will certainly reduce the capacity of the anthracite mines and will surely increase the danger of a coal shortage at the time of year when an increase in production is required by the consumers of coal."

"The operators believe it better to abolish the grievance committee and return absolutely to the method established by the anthracite coal strike commission. The operators believe the rates now paid are fair, but if any adjustment is necessary there is no objection on their part to making such changes as will give the mine miners the opportunity of earning wages that are equitable as compared with those of equivalent occupations."

"Any increase which may be granted must necessarily be eventually paid by the heads of the families and other users of anthracite, the operators while declaring to deal justly with their employees, deem it their plain duty to restrain any unreasonable demands."

WILLARD-MORAN MATCHED

Will Fight in New York for a Purse of $67,500.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Jess Willard, heavyweight champion, signed a contract here to meet Frank Moran, of Pittsburgh, at Madison Square Garden, New York, March 17, in a ten-round match.

The agreement was reached between Dave Lewinsohn, representing Tex Rickard, the California promoter, and Tom Jones, Willard's manager. The terms are that Willard is to receive $47,500 and fifty per cent of the moving picture concession. Moran is to get $20,000.

Ship Builders Raise Wages.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—The William Cramp & Sons Ship and Engine Building company announced an advance of ten per cent in the hourly wage rates to all of the employees of the yards, shops and foundries of the company. This will include between 4000 and 5000 men and will mean a total increase in the payroll of more than $250,000 annually.

CANADA'S PARLIAMENT BUILDING BURNED

Several Lives Lost in Fire That Swept Structure.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Canada's parliament buildings were destroyed by an incendiary fire that started in the reading room of the house of commons and spread with remarkable rapidity throughout the buildings.

The bodies of two women have been taken from the ruins and it is feared many others lost their lives, as the fire took place while parliament was in session and several members are reported missing. The monetary loss will be heavy, as the buildings were the finest in the country.

Sir Robert Borden escaped from his room without hat or coat. Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, is badly burned.

Several members were cut by falling glass and burned by flames in escaping.

Mme. Seignie, wife of Speaker Seignie, had to jump through the window of her apartments which are in the commons chamber. Her guests, Mrs. Bray and Mrs. Dussault, of Quebec, were burned to death. Their bodies were recovered.

Hon. Martin Burrell, minister of agriculture, is authority for the statement that the fire was of incendiary origin.

"There is no doubt but that the fire is the result of chemical explosions carefully planned," he said. "The fire simply spread as if through dynamite."

HAS FAITH IN QUICK REMEDY FOR CATARRH

The People's Drug Store Guarantees That Hyomei Will Relieve The Worst Cases of Catarrh in Gettysburg.

When one of the most reputable concerns in Gettysburg guarantees that a medicine will produce benefit or they will refund the money, it speaks volumes for the merits of that remedy. It is in this way that The People's Drug Store is selling Hyomei, the treatment that has helped so many cases of both acute and chronic catarrh in Gettysburg and vicinity.

Hyomei is not a pill nor is it a spray or a lotion that must be rubbed in. It is an oil, the air of which you just breathe in your nose, throat and lungs by the aid of an inhaler that comes with every outfit. Benefit will usually be seen from the very first treatment.

This air destroys all germ life in the air passages and lungs and enriches and purifies the blood with the additional ozone it supplies. It banishes catarrh of the head and throat and respiratory organs. Wherever these mucous membranes contain catarrhal germs, there Hyomei will do its work of healing.

The complete Hyomei outfit is inexpensive and includes an inhaler, dropper and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks treatment.

Remember that if Hyomei does not relieve you The People's Drug Store will refund your money.

SANDY BEND IN PERIL

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1915, by McClure News Paper Syndicate

When the constable at Judge Hoke's court had cried "Hear ye!" three times the judge arose and said:

"Men of Sandy Bend, if I speak in a broken voice and my chin quivers when I talk it is because I am feeling such eminent emotions as I have not felt in twenty years before.

"Why this emotion? Why do I stand here with the tears ready to fall at any minute?

"I will tell you what is the matter, though you know as well as I do. We have been fighting civilization for thirty years, and at last we are licked. Yes, my friends, I hate to say the word, but we are licked.

"What was that which awoke Sandy Bend from its happy sleep at daylight the other mornin'? What was that noise that jumped us out of our blankets and caused us to look at each other as if we had awakened in another land?

"Toot! Toot! Toot!"

"Yes, great heavings, it was the toot of a locomotive on the new railroad, only five miles away, which is to run into Sandy Bend next week. Think of it—a railroad into Sandy Bend! That's one of the plums we have been licked on. It has wanted to come here for the last fifteen years, but our guns have kept it away.

"Yes, my tears fall and my chin quivers as I talk of civilization coming in to this happy community. We have hung horse thieves, about one a week, for years past. About once a week also some man has been shot for holding five acres at poker.

"My tears fall afresh as I realize Sandy Bend has been a little paradise on earth. And now it is to be crushed, wrecked, ruined forever as the right kind of a town to live in. Why, the Chingmen will make their skiddoo, and the dogs will run away from it! Since that toot of the locomotive the other mornin' there has been a man here to see about a street car line. A street car line for Sandy Bend to take the place of the cayuse!

"And along comes a man who says Sandy Bend ought have waterworks. Is it any wonder that three or four men fainted away on hearin' of it?

"And along comes another man and says we are to have gas works.

"Hasn't Sandy Bend got along with tallow candles and kerosene torches all this time, and has anybody kicked about it?

"Here is a most beautiful and happy spot. There are mountains all around. In the mountains grows the grizzly bear, and the wild Indian hunts for the white man's scalp. The sun ever shines there. There are no spring floods. The winter don't freeze a man to death. The birds twitter, the jack rabbits play about like lamkins, and there is jest shootin' enough to keep the blood in good circulation.

"And all this is to be wrecked and ruined and brung low! What for? That the thing called civilization may move from east to west and gobble up everything in its path.

"And what do we get by the change? We get the plug hat and cane; we get the tan shoes and red neckties; we get the dress coat and the eyeglass; we get the poodle dog and the class of men who are not much better.

"If we remain here amid all these changes we have got to dress different, live different, act different. And how many days do you think the Lord will give us? Why, we'll begin to die off like flies in a hailstorm, and inside of six months the toughest of us will be laid low. Civilization won't even let us be buried with our friends up on the hillside, but the newcomers will start what they call a cemetery and sell the land off at $10 a lot and make a law that anybody who dies has got to be buried there.

"Now, about myself. As a court of justice I haven't given you much law, but I have given you justice as I understood it. If I have made any error it was an error of judgment and not of the heart. There will come along in a few weeks a man to take my place. He will run this court accordin' to law. There will be a dozen lawyers in the room, and no dogs admitted. One lawyer after another will get up and gab; one witness after another will tell the truth or lie about it. It will take that thar court a whole day to try a case that you have heard me decide in five minutes.

"The question is being asked on every side, What kin be done? Kin any thing be done? I doubt it very much, but we will hold a public meetin' to morrow. If we kin raise a hundred men to go out to the new railroad and shoot off the hundred men workin' there maybe we can hold civilization back a year or two longer or altogether. Let every man in Sandy Bend be at the meetin' to morrow with two guns and a determination to defend our rights or perish in the attempt.

"Thar is a case here before this court. It is that of Bill Savage agin Ace High, the Chingman who does our washin'. They got into a squabble about an old shirt and drew their guns and fired bullets at each other. Bill may be in the right or Ace High may be in the right. I ain't goin' into the case as a court, but as an individual. I am goin' to turn them both out doors without their guns and let 'em fight it out. My emotions as a court are too deeply stirred to listen to any testimony, but as an individual I shall be interested in seein' a fight between a Chink and a white man.

"This court now stands adjourned perhaps forever. Let us all weep."

Seems the Longest.

Standardizing Retailing

Retailers, especially the small store-keepers, are becoming better acquainted.

They are learning how to count costs, compute profits and stop leaks.

They are discerning the money-making possibilities in smaller stocks and quicker turnovers.

They are learning the power of newspaper advertising and the profit that comes from co-operation with their local newspaper.

They are watching the national advertising in the newspapers and studying how to make it pay them.

They are seeing to it that their windows show the advertised goods at the time the newspaper advertising is running.
